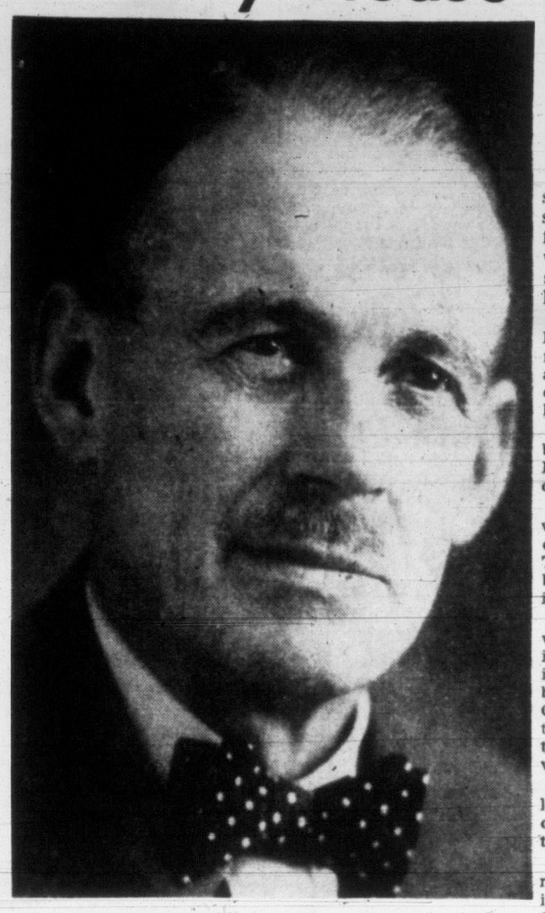
B.C. Shocked By Death Of Tory House Leader



THE LATE E. C. CARSON

E. C. Carson Succumbs to Heart Attack

By GORDON FORBES

British Columbia was shocked today by news of the sudden death of Ernest Crawford Carson, former public works minister and Progressive Conservative House leader.

The 58-year-old member for Lillooet—"the province's greatest road builder"—died of a heart attack while digging in the garden of his Mount Joy Avenue home Tuesday afternoon.

Funeral arrangements were being made this afternoon. Hayward's Funeral Parlor is in charge.

Mr. Carson is survived by a widow; two sons, Jack and Pat of Victoria; a daughter, Mrs. Thomas Sutton, Kamloops; a brother, Robert, and two sisters in Salmon Arm and Princeton.

Death of the man who might well have become Tory leader in B.C. cut the P.C.'s strength in the Legislature to three members. Political sources felt Mr. Carson was the man most likely to succeed Herbert Anscomb at the party's forthcoming convention.

Conservative fortunes are at a low ebb. Before the election, by contrast, they held 11 seats in the 48-seat Legislature.

Death of the quiet-spoken member leaves the House standings at: Social Credit, 17; C.C.F., 18; Liberals, 6; Progressive Conservatives, 3; Labor, 1 and vacant, 3.

BY-ELECTION UNCERTAIN

Premier W. A. C. Bennett could not say today if a by-election will be called in Lillooet riding to fill the vacancy before the spring session.

The premier said he was "too shocked" by Mr. Carson's death to consider the political implications.

Although there are by-elections in Similkameen and Columbia November 24 it is unlikely a Lillooet by-election could be arranged for the same date.

"Ernie" Carson was born on the family ranch at Pavilion Mountain in the Cariboo country of the province's interior. He attended a tiny country school until the age of nine. Then he and a brother alternated six months at school in Vancouver with six months at work on the ranch.

After high school, he worked with a railway survey crew, hoping to become an engineer. The First World War intervened and on his return home from overseas he had to take over management of the ranch.

Later, he branched into business and was elected as a Conservative in 1928.

SHOWED INDEPENDENCE

Mr. Carson became minister of mines and trade and industry in the Coalition government in 1942, and in 1946 he took the job he really liked—minister of public works. He remained in that position until the breakup of Coalition in January.

DID TOUGHEST JOB

With B.C.'s huge road construction program since the Second World War, he had the most difficult and complicated administrative job in the government.

He was deeply convinced good roads were the key to B.C.'s development.

He hated making speeches, in spite of his long political experience, and admitted recently he was still extremely nervous before an audience.

All Province Pays Tribute to Carson

Sudden death Tuesday of Ernie Carson, long-time member of the B.C. Legislature and former public works minister, has drawn tributes from people in all walks of life throughout the province.

John Hart, premier of the first Coalition administration, today paid him a fitting tribute with: "He was one of the finest fellows I knew. I thought the world of Ernie Carson."

Mr. Hart said: "Word of his death came as a great shock to me. I was associated with him a long time. There was no finer member or minister than he. He was a man of sterling qualities and loyalty. He was always reliable.

"I had the greatest confidence in him and appointed him to the responsible office of minister of public works because I knew there was none more capable."

Premier W. A. C. Bennett said of Mr. Carson:

"Mr. Carson's death is a great shock. We were great personal friends. It was always recognized that he was one of the ablest administrators and one of the best public works ministers that B.C. has ever had. His sudden passing is a great loss to the Legislature and to the public life of B.C. We extend our deepest sympathy to Mrs. Carson and the family."

John H. Cates, former B.C. labor minister—"Mr. Carson was not only a colleague of mine in the cabinet but a great personal friend. He was a man I ad-

13 DAYS BEFORE ELECTION

Presidential Battle Rages in East U.S.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (AP)—The white-hot battle for the White House centred in the vote-rich east today with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Governor Adlai Stevenson, and four of their most prominent supporters criss-crossing campaign trails in five states.

With election only 13 days hence, the two presidential candidates and President Truman, vice-president Alben Barkley, Senator Robert A. Taft and Senator Estes Kefauver converged on the area with hard-hitting speeches.

Stevenson, the Democratic candidate, headed for Buffalo, N.Y., to make a major speech tonight. He paused en route at South Bend, Ind.

In an address prepared for delivery at the University of Notre Dame, Stevenson said the "quackery of medicine men who claim to cure the disease with words of hate and loud accusations" cannot banish Communism from the United States.

Eisenhower, his Republican opponent, flies to Hartford, Conn., for his first talk of the day, visits Springfield and Pittsfield, Mass., and then goes to Troy, N.Y., for a night radio address.

He, too, took Communism as his theme Tuesday in a Boston address in which he indirectly slapped at the Democratic leadership in Washington. He said his opposition to Communism isn't based on theory, but is "reinforced by some first-hand experiences with Communism and Communists."

"And they were not of the Yalta or Potsdam kind, either," he added.

Newspaper men reported that the emotional welcomes Eisenhower received in Boston, Cambridge, and other points Tuesday were among the warmest of his campaign. Some onlookers said they had seen nothing like it since the days of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Truman, winding up a three-day swing through the east, said in an address prepared for delivery at Scranton, Pa., that Eisenhower is "taking extreme liberties with the truth" when he says the social security law is a "bipartisan" law. He said Republican congressmen voted heavily against such things as old age insurance, social security expansion legislation, and other similar laws.

Quoting Eisenhower as telling a Los Angeles audience that social security "is much on my heart," the president said apparently it "is only recently arrived there."

The president makes a major address at Pittsburgh tonight, then heads for home.

Iran Formally Breaks With Great Britain

British Charged With Inspiring Plots

TEHRAN, Iran, Oct. 22 (Reuters) — Iran today delivered a formal note breaking diplomatic relations with Britain.

The British envoy here was summoned to the foreign office to receive it.

Foreign Minister Hussein Fatemi told reporters the contents of the note will be released later today (12.30 p.m., EST).

The diplomatic break comes as the latest move in the 18-month-long oil dispute. Premier Mohammed Mossadegh said in a radio address last week that Britain had "forced" Iran to break off relations.

A diplomatic break means that neither country will have legations in the other. Fatemi said today that the Iranian charge d'affaires had been instructed to leave London within a week. Sweden will look after Iranian interests there.

Today's formal note was handed over after a special session of the cabinet agreed on the text.

Fatemi did not disclose how long the British embassy here will have to shut down.

He said British embassy officials had openly inspired plots and intrigued against the security and independence of Iran.

First available comment from the British embassy was "we are sorry Persia has taken this step but if it is to be, let it be."

The final break in relations followed a stiff exchange of notes between Britain and Iran on Britain's "final offer" and a counter-offer by Iran in the dispute over Iran's nationalization of the British-owned Anglo-Iranian Oil Company.

Kenya Quiet, Awaiting Next Mau Mau Move

NAIROBI, Kenya, Oct. 22 (Reuters).—Kenya was quiet today as Africans and British troops and civilians awaited the next move in the Mau Mau terror campaign.

British troops flown from the Suez Canal Zone today joined African troops and police in making armored patrols of areas where Mau Mau activity has been greatest.

More than 100 Africans have been arrested since Monday in connection with the murderous anti-white society.

(In London today, it was announced that Oliver Lyttelton, British colonial secretary, will fly to Nairobi Tuesday to make investigations.)

Some 68 American and British stars were invited to take part in the show, including Sir Laurence Olivier and his wife, Vivian Leigh, dancer Gene Kelly, Yvonne De Carlo, ballerina Tamara Toumanova, Douglas Fairbanks Jr., and Kirk Douglas.

The feature movie for the show at the Empire cinema, luxurious M-G-M theatre on Leicester Square, will be the musical "Because You're Mine," starring Mario Lanza. A number of early films will be shown as a "Cavalcade of the Cinema."

Celgar Granted Forest License

Green Light Given $65 Million Integrated Industry for Interior

The provincial government today gave Celgar Development Co. Ltd. permission to go ahead with establishment of a $65,000,000 integrated forest industry at Castlegar.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett and Lands and Forests Minister Robert E. Sommers, in a joint statement, said appeals against granting of the 960,000-acre forest management license had been disallowed.

The government decision gives Celgar the go-ahead signal to start work on its forest development which is designed to produce lumber, sulphate pulp, newsprint and dissolving pulp used in the manufacture of textiles, plastics and explosives.

The license, as granted by the government, contains a number of provisions which reflect new government policy on forest management. The government is hopeful existing licensees will adhere to the new policies, but the government cannot force them. The new provisions will apply to the Celgar license and all future licenses.

"This government realized that previous forest management licenses have not entirely given to the people of British Columbia the results which they desired. Careful consideration and study have resulted in a number of proposed revisions and additions which will be incorporated in Celgar's license," Mr. Sommers said.

Small Operators Are Protected

The small operator has been protected by the establishment of three public working circles, he said. These areas will provide small operators with an annual yield of about twice the volume of timber which they now produce.

One of the most important policy changes is that Celgar must provide a reasonable percentage of the annual crop to be removed by local contractors.

"The government is very much aware that it must be alert to foster and to retain the independence and initiative of the small operator," Mr. Sommers said.

He added that the government has further safeguared the rights of the people in the fact that no foreshore rights will be alienated. Furthermore, anyone may enter and use the licensed area for recreation. Anyone may prospect for minerals in the area or carry on any legitimate business.

Another new feature is that the roads in a forest management license area will be open for public use on Sundays and on statutory holidays.

The minister said the government has been careful to retain all rights to the land. It may withdraw any portion of the area for higher economic use, such as agriculture, mining development, industrial development and the establishment of townsites.

Coal Strike Settlement Hopes Dim

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (UP).—Government and industry leaders abandoned today whatever faint hopes they had that John L. Lewis might call off the "milk money" strike of 350,000 soft coal miners.

The miners began walking out last week, without any formal authorization from their union, after the Wage Stabilization Board lopped off 40 cents of the $1.90-a-day pay raise which Lewis had negotiated. Harry M. Moses, president of the Bituminous Coal Operators' Association, appealed to Lewis to order the men back to work for the $1.50-a-day increase approved by the board.

14.6 Per Cent Increase Sought, 10-Cent Pay Phone

British Columbia Telephone Company announced today it is seeking an average 14.6 per cent increase in exchange rates and a boost from 5 to 10 cents on pay-station charges.

The increase, if granted, would mean about 35 cents more on the average two-party monthly phone bill in Victoria, and $1.80 on the individual business phone.

The company is also asking an average increase of 12.2 per cent in long distance rates.

Mayor Claude Harrison on receiving a copy of the application said flatly he would oppose any increase.

"I haven't examined the application yet but I will oppose any increase to any of these public utilities," the mayor said. "The people can't keep on paying more. We're not that wealthy.

"I have opposed the B.C. Electric consistently in their applications for increases and I will oppose this."

The telephone company applied to the Board of Transport Commissioners for permission to increase the rates to meet increased costs.

The 14.6 per cent increase in exchange rates is exclusive of inter-exchange charges, which would be unchanged.

INTERIM BOOST ASKED

The company is asking the board to grant an interim hearing at Ottawa at the earliest moment "so that some relief may be given, pending the holding of a full-scale public hearing in British Columbia at a later date."

The company estimates the proposed increases in exchange and long distance rates would give it an increase in exchange and long distance revenue of $2,959,978 or 12.5 per cent.

The application states that the new wage agreement with the union employees, effective June 1, 1952, plus increases in the salaries of non-union employees will increase 1953 operating expenses by $1,031,865.

If the application is granted two-party telephone charges in Vancouver will rise from $3.90 a month to $4.40 and individual business telephones from $11.70 to $13.65.

EARNINGS DOWN

The company states the lag which has occurred between the time that expenses have increased and increased rates have been granted, has made earnings inadequate.

It states that rates and charges now in effect are "not sufficient to produce the revenue required to meet the necessary costs to maintain and operate its property devoted to the public use."

It estimates that on the basis of its present rates it will suffer a heavy loss in 1953.

This is the third application for rate increases made by the company since 1921.

The company, in its application, claims that it needs the increased rates to maintain its credit and attract capital needed to enlarge and improve its services.

It asks an interim hearing by the board in order than an interim increase may be granted because of the company's "rapidly deteriorating financial position and the urgent necessity for additional revenues."

Fog Ties Up Ships, Planes In Vancouver

VANCOUVER, Oct. 22 (CP).—Vancouver today groped its way through the second bad fog in less than a week.

A flurry of accidents was reported to police as visibility in some places was reduced to "zero." Steamships were unable to move out of the harbor and no airplanes left the ground.

A young truck driver was seriously injured when his light panel truck collided with a moving freight train and was dragged 118 feet. Bernarous Rentmeister, 23, suffered a possible skull fracture and multiple lacerations. The truck was almost demolished.

Minister Seeks People's Will On B.C.H.I.S.

Eric Martin Plans 'Grass Roots' Tour

Health and Welfare Minister Eric Martin will embark early in November on a fact-finding tour of central and northern British Columbia in an effort to obtain "grass roots" information on the people's hospital insurance wants.

It was learned today the government's plan to bring delinquents into the scheme—through suspension of arrears—has not, to date, had the desired effect, and the minister intends to go out among the people and get the reasons first-hand.

Actual figures on the number of delinquents who have reinstated themselves under the "new deal" are not available, but it is known the amount has been disappointing to the government.

Mr. Martin is hoping that the number will increase at the end of the year, but other ministers are not so hopeful.

The health minister's tour will serve the purpose of acquainting him more fully with the desires of the people before new hospital insurance legislation is prepared for the spring session.

VISIT HOSPITALS

The minister, it is understood, will discuss hospital insurance with numerous hospital executives on his tour and will address many public meetings.

Purpose of the trip, according to cabinet sources, is to "find out just what the people do want in the way of hospital insurance."

Roughly one in five British Columbians, who should be covered by hospital insurance, have evaded paying premiums.

In an effort to draw these persons into the scheme voluntarily, the government early in September announced suspension of arrears for delinquents.

This means anybody who hasn't paid premiums ever since institution of the scheme in 1949 can re-establish themselves by paying the current premium only.

The government, however, has stressed that through procedures provided in the Hospital Insurance Act the government will continue to collect premium arrears from those persons who can well afford to pay. This is done by making arrangements for installment payments in accordance with a delinquent's means.

Pr. Kathleen Probe Halted

VANCOUVER, Oct. 22 (CP).—Owing to the illness of Mr. Justice Sidney Smith, the hearing into the sinking of the C.P.R. steamship Princess Kathleen was not heard today.

The inquiry will begin next Monday.

MATTER OF HIGH POLITICAL POLICY

Britain's Sea Lord Refrains From Answering Bombing Query

Whether U.N. forces should bomb Red targets in Manchuria is a question which even Britain's first sea lord won't answer.

Sir Rhoderick McGrigor, conferring today with Rear Admiral Wallace B. Creery, flag officer, Pacific coast, said:

"That is a matter of high political policy on which I am not able to comment.

Sir Rhoderick arrived here Tuesday night by plane from Vancouver after reaching Canada after a month-long tour of the Far Eastern fighting front. From here he will proceed to Ottawa for top-level conferences with Canadian chiefs of staff and defense department officials.

SIR R. McGRIGOR

The Sea Lord told of time spent aboard the British aircraft carrier Ocean whose planes are operating with high efficency and success against the enemy.

Of carrier pilots, he said: "I have found them all in excellent battle fitness and of the highest morale."

Of the general U.N. naval force: "It is an inspiration to see the teamwork between the ships of the Commonwealth navies and the ships of other United Nations forces. They have certainly established a high reputation for their contributions to the campaign."

He said he deeply regretted the recent casualties sustained by the Canadian destroyer Iroquois, which was hit by Chinese Communist shore batteries while on patrol.

"Chinese shore batteries have inevitably obtained an occasional hit but they should not be rated too highly."

Sir Rhoderick visited the Iroquois, Nootka and Crusader while overseas.

ON THE TIMES

By ART STOTT

A few years ago newspapers in Canada carried a statement from Dr. Brock Chisholm. As a psychiatrist he was revealing some of the dangers of the belief in Santa Claus.

Near as I can remember, he said that it was wrong to build up the idea of Santa in a child's mind because when the kid found out, a part of his faith would be shattered. It seemed at the time—and recollection's hazy—he was illustrating the manner in which a youngster can get that feeling of insecurity through the betrayal of misplaced trust.

Stott

Maybe he had a good point. Maybe his explanation was reasonable enough. But when it came to Santa, who wanted to be reasonable? All across the nation writers jumped on Brock Chisholm.

Brock Chisholm was the guy who had tried to kill Santa. There you had Brock Chisholm. And because you'd lost your temper a little at a person who cast doubts on something you cherished, you dismissed him with a pitying sneer.

Only you didn't dismiss Brock Chisholm.

It's next to impossible to dismiss a person like Dr. Chisholm—particularly when the American Public Health Association at its annual meeting in Cleveland last night presented to him the Albert and Mary Lasker Foundation award with the citation that he "inspired and organized the vast post-war international health campaign which has brought about a remarkable reduction in sickness and mortality throughout the world."

You might have read the story on Brock Chisholm by Albert Deutsch in The New York Times Magazine. If you have, you'll find you can't hate the man. You'll just bury that little Santa Claus incident and join me on the Chisholm bandwagon.

My Kind of Canadian

It's pretty flattering to Canadians to see Dr. Chisholm painted in the colors Albert Deutsch used. It shows him as the type of Canadian most of his fellow countrymen admire. It makes you feel just a little prouder that one of your own folk can make the contribution to the world that he has been making as director-general of the World Health Organization. You throw out your chest a little more when Deutsch says Dr. Chisholm might well be called the first Surgeon-General of the Human Race.

There's a particular type of bigness in that sort of title. It combines all you've read about surgical wizards with the good honest affection and respect you have for your family doctor. And the personality becomes more friendly when you see him described as "a rather slight, mild-mannered, blue-eyed individual with cherubic visage and thinning grey hair" who has a "manifest devotion to the tasks of helping other human beings."

You begin to admire him for the breadth of his outlook and his passionate belief in the equality of all peoples. You hope he'll find enough mature men in the right places who, as Deutsch phrases it, will have "the ability to face reality and to evaluate it, objectively, without the distorting impediments of hate, morbid fear and false loyalties."

And you're inclined to think that if he can reach such men, the administrative genius and influence he has shown in his World Health Organization work might weld them into a team to protect humanity from "man's last enemy—himself."

Letting in the Light

You read of Dr. Chisholm's accomplishments with a relatively small budget: As the head of W.H.O. he and his colleagues have been spreading the knowledge and information required to check disease and forestall death in what are sometimes called the under-developed countries. You learn of the success of that technique in beating back malaria which once claimed 3,000,000 lives a year.

If, shading your admiration for the man a little, you think of his Santa Claus statement a few years ago, why, just remember that bus advertisement that's been staring down at you since mid-summer. For weeks now that red-nosed apple-cheeked figure in the red stocking cap has been saying: "I'll be ready for Christmas," and asking, "Will you?"

If he's asking me, the answer is "No." And if he keeps on asking much more, I'll be ready to agree with Dr. Chisholm on the expendibility of that character who once had the decency to keep out of sight until December.

TRIBUTES TO ERNIE CARSON

mired very much, not only for his ability and integrity, but for his great zeal for the welfare of the province of British Columbia.

"During all the time I knew him, he gave unsparingly of himself and never considered his own activities first or paid heed to the warnings of fatigue in his unswerving efforts on behalf of the province and its people."

Cornelius F. Moriarty, veteran member of the Legislative Press Gallery—"I knew Ernie Carson since the days when he was a Conservative back bencher for Lillooet in the Tolmie government. He was without doubt one of the finest men every to occupy a seat in the Legislature."

F. A. White, president, Victoria branch Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society, "The passing of Mr. Carson is a personal shock to each and every member of the Victoria branch of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society of which he had been an executive member since its beginning. No man more deserved the title honorable. To his wife, our beloved Mrs. Carson, goes our deepest sympathy."

Arthur Ash, former Liberal member for Saanich, "Ernie Carson contributed much in public service to the people of British Columbia. His work and monument is visible throughout this province—the roads of British Columbia. We have lost an able public servant."

Former Premier Byron Johnson: "I was shocked to hear of his sudden passing. During the period when I was premier, Mr. Carson was minister of public works. The tremendous highway development in that time is a fitting tribute to his energy, foresight and leadership in his department.

"British Columbia has lost an outstanding native son, one who has served his province well."

R. H. Pooley, former attorney-general: "Ernie Carson was about the best friend I had in the world. We fished together and hunted together and we were in politics for years together. This province has lost the best public works minister it ever had. He was an absolutely genuine, A1 citizen. No better fellow ever lived than Ernie Carson."

Bruce Hutchison, editor of The Victoria Times and a close friend: Ernest Carson was the finest man, both in his public and private life, whom it was my privilege to count as a friend.

The public knew him as its faithful servant whose labors resulted in his untimely passing. His friends—and they were in all political parties—knew him as a man of open-handed generosity, steadfast courage and a most delicate honor.

In him, more perhaps than in any contemporary, lived the true spirit of the British Columbia frontier and the quiet strength of this land."

Mrs. Nancy Hodges, Liberal M.L.A. and a neighbor of the Carson's: This is a very tragic loss to the province. His death is another reminder of how much people in public life give to their work . . . He was an exceptionally fine man."

Dr. Gordon Grant, president, Victoria Federal Progressive Conservative Association: "Ernie Carson was the kind of man who leaves the world a great deal poorer when he goes. He was a martyr to public service; if he had lived his life according to selfish motives, he would have quit years ago. His monument, the highways he built for B.C., will stand for years to come."

J. A. A. George, prominent Conservative: "British Columbia and the Progressive Conservative party have lost a man whose devotion to duty was an example to his friends and an inspiration to those who worked with him. In this day of changing values, his integrity and loyalty were unquestioned. His services will long be remembered."

Walter S. Miles, Conservative candidate for Victoria: "One of the worst losses B.C. could have had at a time like this. He was a personal friend to everyone. B.C. has lost a wonderful man, and his family has lost a wonderful father."

E. T. Kenney, Liberal M.L.A. for Skeena: "A distinct loss. He made a great contribution to the walfare of the province. He will be sadly missed in the House."

W. T. Straith, former education minister: "He was one of my best friends, for whom I had much respect. He had as broad a knowledge of B.C. affairs as any public man I know. His death is a severe loss."

Mrs. Margaret Harvey: "British Columbia without regard to party politics will mourn the untimely death of Mr. Carson, who since his election to the Legislature in 1928 has given unstintingly of his services to the welfare of his native province."

R. J. Patch, president, Victoria Provincial Progressive Conservative party: "The Legislature and the people of B.C. have suffered a profound loss. Ernie won the respect of all who worked with him, whether politically opposed or otherwise."

Col. D. J. Baldwin, chairman, B.C. Labor Relations Board and a personal friend: "His capabilities were wide and he was extremely sincere. I had great admiration for him, an outstanding citizen whose loss will be felt province-wide."

Howard C. Green, M.P.: "In the passing of Ernie Carson, British Columbia has lost one of her finest sons. Member of an outstanding pioneer family, he knew our province as few have ever done, and threw his whole heart into his job as minister of public works. Sincere, friendly and understanding, he will be missed and remembered in every community in B.C., large or small."

R. C. Macdonald, former B.C. cabinet minister: "I had been associated with Ernie Carson as a member of the government for a good many years and it is a great shock to hear of his sudden passing. In it we have lost a man long devoted to public service and the present high standard of our provincial highways construction is a monument to his record as a public servant.

"His sound judgment, his keen foresight and his devotion to the welfare of the province were always highly respected by all of his colleagues in the government."

Sea of Mud Fails to Halt South Koreans in Bid for Strategic Hill

SEOUL, Korea, Oct. 22 (UP).—South Korean soldiers recaptured Pinpoint Hill on Sniper Ridge today from two Chinese battalions that had churned through a sea of mud and temporarily won the strategic height.

The South Koreans reported their units were re-entrenched atop Pinpoint, highest peak on the ridge.

The Reds began their assault on Sniper Ridge, a long, low-lying ridge on the central front a mile east of Triangle Hill, at dusk Sunday night in a driving rain. One company got within hand grenade range of South Koreans on Pinpoint Hill but could not bring needed reinforcements up the slippery hill to sustain the drive.

About 25 Communists reached the backbone of the ridgeline and jumped into South Korean bunkers. Hand-to-hand fighting raged for an hour while the remainder of the attacking force floundered on the slopes, unable to move up or to retreat in order.

An hour and a half after the attack started, the Communists were beaten.

Rain, fog and slippery hill slopes hampered action all along the 155-mile battlefront. A South Korean attack against Iron Horse Mountain bogged down 40 yards from the crest of the enemy-held peak. Fog blinded tanks which moved out to support the attack.

On the eastern front, a Red platoon of about 40 men worked up to Finger Ridge and began a close-in rifle and machine gun fight with South Koreans. The fighting was still going on at last reports.

Fifth Air Force fighter-bombers and fighters were grounded nearly all day Tuesday. B-29 Superforts, undisturbed by the cloud cover over North Korea, radar-bombed a Communist communications centre and troop billets five miles south of Wonsan on the east coast during the night. They dropped more than 100 tons of 100-pound bombs.

TRAGEDY—In Winnipeg, R.C.M.P. report the death of a 13-year-old boy—Lenica Langam—from terrible burns in Roblin Hospital.

The youngster was turned into a human torch when he and five other boys were pouring gasoline into a parked automobile and somebody struck a match. The gasoline can exploded.

Flames enveloped the boy and he suffered first, second and third-degree burns. Rushed to Roblin Hospital, he died Tuesday morning.

Lenica was the son of P. B. Langam of the Boggy Creek district near Dauphin, Man.

DIED—Dr. Hans Merensky, millionaire diamond and platinum discoverer, died Tuesday in South Africa. He was 81.

In 1927 Merensgy discovered a huge diamond field near Alexander Bay, on the west coast of South Africa. Countless diamonds, believed to have been washed down by rivers, were found lying under rocks. Merensky sold his interest for about $5,000,000.

Three years previously he had discovered the famous Merensky platinum reef in the Lydenberg district of the Transvaal.

VEERED—The season's worst tropical storm veered from its plotted course today and swung into the South China Sea.

The storm, with winds up to 100 miles an hour, rolled up the southeast coast of Luzon, lashed the Tayabas Bay area, then swung due west. The Manila weather bureau said it was moving west-northwest at 12 miles an hour.

There is only one reported death, but communications with outlying areas were out. More than 100 persons were homeless on Samar, Leyte and southeast Luzon. Coastal areas were flooded. Crop damage ran to unestimated millions. Highways, rail lines and bridges were cut. Three boats were sunk.

STARTLING—In New York a French and an American radiologist startled the annual meeting of the American Cancer Society today by describing successful treatment with X-ray radiation alone of inoperable cancers of the breast.

Dr. François Baclesse, of the Curie Institute of Paris, said he treated 151 inoperable breast cancers with X-rays between 1936 and 1946. Forty-four of the women survived and are apparently cancer free.

Dr. Maurice Lenz, professor of clinical radiology, Columbia University's College of Physicians and Surgeons, said he had treated 31 inoperable cases between 1938 and 1940. Ten women survived five years and six still are alive, 10 to 14 years later.

Miss Davis fainted Sunday during her first opening-night number but recovered and carried on. At curtain-time Monday she apologized in a hoarse whisper to her audience for having to cancel her numbers. Tuesday night the entire performance was called off.

Miss Davis' secretary said the star is a "very sick girl" because of the overwork of prolonged rehearsals and a "double cold." Her physiican flew in from New York Tuesday and said she might possibly be able to appear today.

AFRICAN TERROR

Black-White Tension Mounts

Three Crises Face Commonwealth; Race Hatred, Labor, Politics

By ARTHUR GAVSHON

LONDON, Oct. 22 (AP) — Britain's Commonwealth faced three crises in Africa today in the wake of mounting black-white bitterness and bloodshed.

Race hatred, labor unrest and a political upheavel flared anew in independent South Africa and the British East African colonies of Northern Rhodesia and Kenya.

In South Africa, for the first time in recent history a Negro mob over the week-end unleashed its simmering hate against white men, women and children, killing, looting and burning as they went.

In Northern Rhodesia's vital copper mines, 37,000 out of 39,000 Negro workers downed tools for more money and the right to do more skilled work.

In Kenya, on the East African seaboard, British troops flew in as a state of emergency was declared by the Nairobi government to help root out the Mau Mau secret society of tribesmen pledged to drive the whites into the sea.

The situations in the three countries which have produced the turbulence are not the same.

As far as is known, the Negro peoples in southern, central and eastern Africa are in no way linked with each other. They have no organized political movement. Their one common denominator is resentment against white rule and a deepening dissatisfaction with their own lot.

The outburst in Port Elizabeth, South Africa, in which four whites and seven non-whites were killed and many more hurt, seemed spontaneous. Reports from the union stressed that the incident had no connecvtion with the non-white campaign of defiance against race laws—a campaign that has led to the arrest of nearly 6,000 since it was launched last June.

Scared What Morrow May Bring

Nevertheless, racial tensions in South Africa have been rising steadily since the war. Moderates among white and black alike are scared of what the morrow may bring.

Production of copper has been halted by the North Rhodesian strike in four main mines. A similar stoppage before the Second World War led to big-scale clashes, and South Africa sent men and guns to help the colonial authorities crush the miners' resistance.

Some government officials here speculated the new stoppage in part expresses the Negroes' opposition to Britain's project for a new central African state. It would ultimately weld southern and northern Rhodesia and Nyasaland into a new dominion.

The Mau Mau of Kenya is a movement whose exact strength is unknown to the authorities. Its terrorist actions in rural areas since September have been marked by an anti-white fanaticism. The secret society—originating from the intelligent Kikuyu tribe—has been blamed for 41 murders, 12 assaults and 24 hut burnings in the last few weeks.

The mystery men of the Mau Mau draw their strength mainly from the sympathies they have been able to invoke among their fellow Negroes in Kenya. Tens of thousands of them are landless. Those who have farms often have gone hungry because of drought and pests. In the towns, workers' wages have not kept pace with rising living costs.

British officials here have always asserted that there is no strong, organized Communist movement in central or east Africa. In South Africa Prime Minister Daniel Malan's government has banned Communism.

New Hall Is Imposing Structure

Metropolitan's Annex Opens With Ceremony

Congregation to Hear Former Minister, Dr. A. E. Whitehouse, as Chief Speaker

Members of the congregation of Metropolitan United Church will gather tonight to mark the opening of the new addition to the church.

A banquet will be held, starting at 6.30, in the new church recreational hall. Dr. A. E. Whitehouse, former minister of the church, now retired and living in Vancouver, will be main guest and principal speaker of the evening.

The addition, only recently completed, provides, in addition to the main hall, a modern kitchen equipped with latest electrical devices, a ladies' parlor, youth rooms, offices and four rest-rooms.

The recreational hall is 68 by 56 feet and has a 19-foot ceiling. The hall will be used for such games as basketball, badminton and floor hockey, and will serve as well for banquets, concerts and other functions.

The kitchen adjoining is equipped with electric ranges, sinks and numerous cupboards.

Above, on the second floor is a ladies' parlor, 40 by 20, with wall-to-wall carpet and soft lounges. A small kitchenette is attached.

On the top floor is the youth room, measuring 40 by 24, which will serve the various young people's groups operated by the church. On this floor there is also office space.

FATHER GUILTY

NEW YORK, Oct. 22 (UP)—An irate father sought police action against his 15-year-old son when the boy tried to shoot him with a home-made pistol.

Justice Jacob Panken decided Monday the father was the real culprit and found him guilty of contributing to the delinquency of a minor and drunkenly beating his wife over an eight-year period.

Ontario Approves New Tax-Rental Agreement

TORONTO, Oct. 22 (CP)—The Ontario government's five-year tax-rental agreement with the federal government received nearly unanimous support in the Ontario legislature Tuesday.

Liberal and C.C.F. spokesmen said their groups will vote for a bill ratifying the agreement signed last August 29 under which Ontario will turn over, until March 31, 1957, its personal income and corporation tax fields to Ottawa in return for an annual payment.

Liberal house leader Farquhar Oliver, however, demanded the government recognized a "moral obligation" to give municipalities any savings under the agreement. He said it was reported the government will save $25,000,000 in the 1952-53 fiscal year by taking the federal payments rather than collecting its own corporation taxes.

N.Y. Crooner Wants to 'Comfort' Lovely Rita

MADRID, Spain, Oct. 22 (UP)—New York crooner Bob Savage sought today to hire a fast auto and chauffeur to drive to Seville to "comfort" actress Rita Hayworth in view of her marital difficulties with Prince Aly Khan.

Savage, who arrived early this week by plane, sent five dozen roses Tuesday to Miss Hayworth, whom he said he dated in the United States. But the actress was reported to have paid no attention to the flowers. Earlier she told Spanish friends she did not recall ever meeting Savage.

"I am sure that if I had a chance to talk with her for only 10 minutes everything would come out nicely and not only for me but for Rita," Savage said. "I feel that she is no longer in love with Aly."

STUART KEATE, Publisher — BRUCE HUTCHISON, Editor

Ernest Carson

NO PUBLIC SERVANT IN THE history of British Columbia ever gave more of himself to the service of the people than Ernest Carson. At an untimely age, when still larger service was just beginning, his labors have cost him his life. But for the excessive burdens which he undertook, far beyond the duties of office, he would be alive today.

Ernest Carson was a child of British Columbia, born on the first ranch of the Cariboo, and he loved his native land as few men have loved it. He was retiring and modest, not given much to speech, but all his work was inspired by that love, by a secret dream of this land's future and a reverence for its past.

His vision and his energies have left their monument in the highway system of this province, but he has left more than that—an affection among British Columbians, from the capital to the little towns and remote cabins, unique in our time. He earned it not only by his work but by his private character, by a shining integrity and a human kindliness which every man instantly recognized and respected. The sorrow which fills British Columbia today knows no party lines. A great British Columbian has gone when he could be least spared.

Mr. Carson was a man without a shred of personal ambition but his character carried him surely into the highest counsels of government, and there he quickly gained the friendship of politicians in every party. His elevation to the leadership of his own party would have been automatic and no doubt unanimous at the forthcoming convention. And of all Conservatives he was uniquely fitted for that final responsibility. His party has lost its foremost figure and British Columbia a man who, by his own life, brought honor to our democracy.

His passing comes in the prime of his life and at the peak of his powers, but he has gone as he would have wished to go, in the sun of noontime. The sympathy of countless British Columbians, who have long known his gallant companion in that journey and the partner of all his work, will go out to his widow, who has made her own unique place in this community.

It was typical of Mr. Carson that, while he built some of the finest roads in British Columbia efficiently and well he never allowed his name to be attached to any of them. Premier Bennett, who knew him well, no doubt will wish to commemorate his work by naming one of those great projects, perhaps the Hope-Princeton or the Fraser Canyon highways, after him, so that future British Columbians may know their builder and remember one who asked nothing but the chance to work for his people and his land.

Trans-Atlantic Tension

THE CURRENTLY RUFFLED feelings in France are hardly serious enough to provide a foretaste of that inter-capitalistic war predicted by Premier Stalin, as has been suggested in some quarters. But they reflect the problem of the United States in its first attempt at leadership of a large section of the world.

The French were irked by a memorandum from Washington which suggested various ways in which the republic could make better use of American financial assistance.

It was, perhaps, a blunt approach to a delicate subject, but there had been growing criticism in Washington of use of American funds to pursue "colonial" wars instead of building N.A.T.O. strength. The U.S. memorandum was returned as "unacceptable," amid a chorus of outcries from Paris—an outcome which a little second-thinking in the U.S. State Department might have avoided.

But in its reaction France was only following similar anti-American sentiments which have arisen from time to time in the postwar years in other European capitals. London itself, particularly before the re-advent of Churchill, had produced some heated comments on U.S. policy. Parties in West Germany, Italy and other western allies had protested at various times against the diplomatic purposes of American aid, or at least what they conceived to be those purposes. Washington is finding that not only crowned heads lie uneasily. The democratic fedora is also likely to shelter a headache.

In the case of France, however, there are many factors contributing to the present restlessness. While M. Pinay appears to have made a successful effort to control French finances, the enormous drain of the Indo-China fighting continues, with consequent protests from various quarters of the National Assembly. When to this is added the expense of supporting rearmament to meet North Atlantic obligations, tempers of government and opposition alike are apt to become shortened if outsiders proffer advice.

The imminence of a decision on German rearmament, too, increases the French political temperature. Arousing the traditional fear of the country which has suffered two German invasions within living memory, the western democracies' plan to restore armed forces to West Germany must shortly be ratified by the Assembly.

Even separate guarantees from Britain and the United States, in addition to the over-all N.A.T.O. securities, have failed to calm French anxieties, at least in some of the parties. Premier Pinay and Foreign Minister Robert Schuman have supported the plan throughout and say its passage by the Assembly is sure, but a hot debate is in prospect — and French governments have fallen on much less serious issues.

Some observers have seen in the current unrest over U.S. policy and the renewed opposition to an armed Germany a political move to dethrone Foreign Minister Schuman. More than any other man in France, Schuman has worked for greater co-operation with West Germany. As the architect of the coal and steel sharing plan which bears his name, as a leading advocate of German integration into the west European defense circle and a foremost exponent of European federation he has drawn upon himself the full criticism of French isolationists of all shades.

Whether future safety lies in co-operation with Germany or in suppression of German strength is the great and vital question that France faces today. On its answer hinge not only the fortunes of M. Schuman, but of France and all Europe.

The Home Gets the Blame

THE VOICE OF LT.-COL. WALlace Bunton, Salvation Army figure with 46 years' experience in prison work, joins the chorus blaming unsatisfactory homes in Canada for delinquency. All but 1 per cent of juvenile crime, he says, can be traced to the home.

The percentage of young criminals is increasing, he adds, noting that early in his prison work career the majority of men in jail were older, but now most inmates are between 16 and 25.

Two points at least should be clearly stated in any discussion of juvenile crime: First, the number of young people getting into trouble is just a fraction of the total youth population. Second, young people are individuals; they cannot be treated as unidentifiable members of a mass called youth.

Lt.-Col. Bunton's statistics are still impressive. So is his statement that the 99 per cent of juvenile crime attributable to unsatisfactory home backgrounds springs not only from poor homes, but from those of families in comfortable circumstances where a condition of parental delinquency exists.

Yet the problem of juvenile delinquency will not be solved if attention is devoted only to those homes in which parents are a bad influence. It will continue to exist as long as there are homes where parents have little, if any, influence at all.

High pressure living and modern invention have changed the family in the last 30 or 40 years. Its members have ceased to be closely interdependent. The family game, the sing-song around the piano, the quiet talk by the fireside belong largely to an earlier era. The family today breaks up to listen to a radio program, possibly to watch television, to go out to a show.

It no longer has to rely on its own resources. It is freed of the centralization of an earlier day when, without a car, it had to spend more of its time under its own roof.

With the "progress" of the age, it has shucked off ties that bound it together, that maintained it as a unit under parental authority. And until it finds some more adequate substitute than it frequently possesses today, it will lack the stabilizing influence the home once exercised on a younger generation growing up.

Chips

By DAVID BROCK

As is common in middle-age, a friend of mine began to reminisce about all the women he'd once thought of marrying. He dwelt on their virtues with what I took for tenderness, and at times I half suspected him of wistfulness. He felt (unless I misunderstood him) he might have shopped around more. He had married a girl who worked at the Hudson's Bay Company, and he felt he might have done better at Eaton's. (This is not my own joke. I read it first in Irvin S. Cobb, but it is probably older than that).

Brock

The reason this joke is funny is that it expresses an almost universal feeling. A feeling of being somehow gypped. Wives get it just as much as husbands do. And yet, when I think of all the girls who tried to marry me, I think of them with a tenderness so delicate that I can hardly feel it. Discourteous of me, but there it is. I've tried and tried to care a hoot, but never a hoot will come.

PICNICS

In another few weeks it will be absolutely impossible to go on picnics. And thank God for that. Sane men rebel at picnics in October, or even September, sometimes. But lunatics themselves rebel in November, and are home-free until March or so. What I hate worst about picnics is the camera. The camera is not Man's Best Friend. Yet women think no picnic is any good without one. They criticize the picture afterwards. In fact, they refer to the whole theory and practice of photography with contempt, and maintain it is an artistic heresy. But they won't leave the house before a picnic unless they have two or three cameras safely tucked into the car. Honestly, sometimes you'd think photographic film was edible. Or potable. Celluloid sandwiches and Kodak cocktails.

* * *

As I may have told you before in this column, I once saw an advertisement for a movie camera saying that half the fun of owning a movie camera was leaving the damned thing at home and enjoying your outing. (So help me, this is true.) Nor did the advertisement lie, which is more than you can say of some ad-men's brain waves. My idea of a restful picnic is not a dream of disorganized games or disorganized menus. It is a dream of disorganized photography. Photography so disorganized that it almost ceases to exist. I have taken enough pictures of the human jaw munching bread and rolls. I now wish to desist. In fact, I now wish to abscond . . . if you're looking for a good verb, as many people are these days. And good verbs are just as cheap as bad ones.

Organized photography is a terrible thing. It is the sign of vacant minds. If you've had a good time, why do you need a snapshot to remind you of it? And if you've had a bad time, as seems more likely, how can a snapshot improve that time? I've got you both ways, I think. When I say "you," I am addressing the women . . . in other words, the chronic picnickers. Men don't care about snapshots, or even about picnics. Men who are men, I mean.

THRILLS

I have been reading a thriller by one Berkeley Gray. (I can't believe this is his real name. It sounds too easy). It is published by Collins, who normally publish better thrillers than this. Maybe they published this one as a joke. Maybe Mr. Berkeley Gray wrote it as some kind of obscure joke . . . a joke too deep for me. It is about a hero named Norman Conquest. When he doesn't want the villians to know who he is, he signs himself "1066," the playful rascal.

But the author doesn't call him that very often. It is usually the Gay Desperado, or the Bold Buccaneer, or something like that. And the author usually adds that the Gay Desperado has a "hell-for-leather look" in his eye, whatever that means.

* * *

Norman Conquest goes through fantastic adventures. He goes through them with what the author keeps calling "unholy glee." I went through the book with holy glee, and unholy glee, and just good old plain glee. I don't know which part of the plot I liked best . . . the pocket acetylene torch, which the hero used under water to burgle a steel barge full of jewels, or the black fighter-plane which the villians used to attack the hero's car, or the note the heroine managed to secrete in the hero's half-pound of butter.

But I think what I liked best was the hero's private and confidential armpit pocket. Even after the queen of the villians had stripped him naked, before putting him in a weighted sack and sinking him in a river, she didn't notice this pocket. Nor am I surprised. For one thing, it was so flat and so skin-like, "there was no visible sign that it existed, and the false skin was such an exact match that a powerful lens was needed to detect its presence." Even though it contained "a knife blade of incredible strength and keenness, and a flat file." And for another thing, no busy little villianess has time to go searching for such things.

True Glory

Ottawa Citizen

Stung by American criticisms, Premier Antoine Pinay has proclaimed France "a great power that must fulfill her destiny" and carry out "obligations" to "the populations that history has entrusted" to it. These and other tawdry phrases about "an imperious duty of vigilance, with constant awareness of the national dignity" evidently mean the continuation of a colonial policy based on force. They may well make realistic minds in France, or wherever else such stale rhetoric is still in vogue, consider what constitutes greatness in a nation.

Of true glory France has more than most nations. Its philosophers, scientists, artists, men of letters, made it the leader of western civilization. Its revolutionary slogan—"liberty, equality, fraternity"—helped shape modern history. But in this era of the prosaic tax-paying democracy, it needs to temper liberty with a stronger sense of public duty, to give equality and fraternity more meaning at home and in colonies that wish to be free. The test of a nation's greatness today is its contribution to human welfare.

WORLDLY-WISE

If Dr. Hickman is correctly reported when he says, "More and more wise men ensure the well-being of the world," and he has in mind the worldly-wise, then the outlook for the future is not very bright.

The worldly-wise intellectuals of the past and the present have run true to form as Paul in his first letter to the Corinthians has so aptly expressed their condition.

LIQUOR QUESTION

Re your leader "No Voice on Liquor." It is because the average citizen knows the dice are loaded, so to speak. For example, in your report of the proceedings of the enquiry commission, a paid agitator appeared before said commission advocating no "cocktail bars." Surely if Chairman H. H. Stevens were sincere he should have rebuked said person by saying "Do not talk such rot; you are fully aware there are already several cocktail bars in operation within the province of B.C., camouflaged as private clubs."

Why does not the association, advocates of no cocktail bars within the province of B.C., advocate that the cocktail bars now in existence within the confines of B.C. be abandoned?

Why does the government not compel the brewers to brew the beer from malt and hops in place of the present concoction or else their licence will be withdrawn?

In conclusion on numerous occasions in the past the writer has been informed by young Canadian soldiers who resided in the British Isles in the last war they liked the British pub. It was far superior to our beer parlors, wherein one has nothing to divert his mind, only to drink, drink, drink.

GREAT EDUCATOR

By press and pulpit and organizations, the 1952 edition of the Bible is being widely acclaimed. May it be accorded the appreciation of study that the perennial world's best seller deserves.

"The Bible Is True" is the title of a thrilling book of archaeological revelations by Sir Charles Marston, veteran of his profession in uncovering some of the earth's earliest civilization.

Iraq and Iran, so much in the news today, contain the remains of a vast civilization more than 5,000 years before Christ, he asserts. The science of archaeology testifies to the Bible accounts of such marvels as the deluge, the wonders of Babylon, the fall of Jericho and so on, even to the most ordinary customs of the day.

Take the art of early writing, for example, which cynical critics have ignorantly termed "the theory of a pious fraud."

Cuneiform tablets (baked clay writings) witness to writing many centuries before Moses' time. Hieroglyphic writings on the walls of the galleries and rooms in the Egyptian pyramids of Sakkara tell of a standard of religion such as is contained in the Book of Job, the Psalms, Proverbs, etc., that go back to the time of Enoch, the man "who walked with God" and was translated, aged 365 years. Verily the Bible is a great educator.

STILL UNHAPPY

The curator of Victoria's Art Centre, as a jury member, in a long preamble to his attempt to justify the indelicate act of the jurors in hanging pictures of one of their number, did so by adorning himself with the thorny crown of martyrdom and even darkly hints at the need of police protection.

Art jurors are in the same category of umpires, referees, dog show judges, whose duties, while often thankless, nevertheless are undertaken by individuals, not commonly plagued by timorousness or the martyr complex, except when palpably at fault.

Be that as it may, the fact remains that the juror in question is not only a director, but also an art teacher, currently advertising for pupils. And, as the success of the Centre largely depends on the showing of the productions of art teachers and their successful pupils (the artists of today and tomorrow) the inference of indelicacy should be quite clear. Moreover, the plea that this particular juror had unselfishly served the Art Centre for many years, should not have had any weight in the decision.

The curator avers sweepingly that this sort of thing is done in Vancouver, Toronto, New York, San Francisco and might even be emulated in Timbuctoo. It is possible that there our curator may successfully make the natives swallow his unsupported assertions. In maintaining my viewpoint, let it be understood that I in no wise wish to detract from the undoubted merit of the pictures involved.

The curator stresses the fact that the jurors were chosen, so that one represented the traditional and conservative outlook, another the middle-of-the-road viewpoint and the third the modern or radical approach. The resultant selection finally hung, showed that the first two must have been badly overridden.

Finally the successful competitors are graced with the post-paid return of their picture, while the unsuccessful, though equally earnest artists, having also paid identical entrance fees, are inferentially told: "Come and pick up your rubbish off the floor in the back room." Surely, they rated at least an old trestle table, even without cover.

Nobody Is An Average Man

By JOSEPH and STEWART ALSOP from Washington

BEING reunited after a good many weeks of cross-country barnstorming, these reporters have tried to pool their impressions of the Presidential campaign to date. The result, it may as well be admitted, has not been immensely enlightening. Yet there is one point of strong agreement. Some very phoney cliches are now being parrotted by all and sundry.

One such phoney is the story that Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson "has been talking over the head of the average man." This one is oddly reminiscent of the soothing promises of the professional huckster; that you can join the national elite by buying this mass-produced toothpaste or that mass-produced deodorant.

Joseph

People are a bit cynical about the huckster's promises nowadays, but a lot of them take the Stevenson story with comic literalness. All over the country, perfectly impeccably average men and women rather smugly tell you, "of course, what Gov. Stevenson says is over the head of the average guy, but I think he is the best speaker I've ever heard."

Thus what was originally Republican propaganda against Stevenson, has now transformed enjoyment of a Stevenson speech into a sort of patent of intellectual nobility. More and more millions are becoming noble this easy way, without even the bother of returning a box-top.

Not all Stevenson's speeches have been successful, to be sure. But the more characteristic Stevenson orations almost invariably charm and very often move and persuade the Governor's hearers. He is undoubtedly attracting an increasing audience. By his voice alone, he is undoubtedly catching the public imagination. And these developments in turn account for the increasing crowds at Stevenson's meetings, and the feeling of a Democratic upturn that many observers now have.

A similar phoney, but with reverse English, is the theory that Sen. Richard Nixon's famous television broadcast on his private expense fund was an unalloyed triumph. A typical experience of one of these reporters occurred on the trip back to Washington, a few days ago. Five fellow voyagers, all extremely average, modest - to - prosperous businessmen, were engaged in the usual smoking room talk about politics. The topic of Nixon came up, as it often does in such gatherings.

Stewart

"Of course," said one of the group, "that telecast of Nixon's was pure corn, and after I thought about it a little I didn't like it much. But it went over big with the average guy."

The four other perfectly average guys in the group solemnly agreed that what Nixon said was "soap opera" but had pleased the common people. Three of the five rather shrewdly inquired how bribery was ever to be identified if the acceptance of personal expense funds became an approved practice. And so the subject was somewhat comically disposed of, in a way that both these reporters have often encountered.

Besides quantities of such accidental evidence, there are some pretty hard facts that suggest the Nixon affair was not all gain for the Republicans.

For instance, after the Nixon telecast, the pro-Nixon San Francisco Chronicle, with a daily circulation of about 160,000, received the truly staggering total of almost 2,000 letters. At least nine in every 10 of these letters were critical of Nixon. Many other newspapers, right across the country, are reported to have encountered a similar delayed anti-Nixon reaction.

In short, if Nixon made friends, he also made enemies. And in politics the enemies often count more than the friends.

Ups and Downs

By BRIAN TOBIN

"IT'S a pity," said the Elevator Man, "that fear is so often the trigger for our actions. Many an inoffensive animal has been killed, for instance, because some human was afraid of it. In other words, the victim was killed because of what it might do, rather than for what it was doing. Snap judgment is hazardous at any time, and applied to a proposition like that it becomes doubly shakey. Of course, you can hardly blame a fella in a tough spot from shooting first and asking afterwards. Even if you're sure a wild animal is harmless it's hard to tell if the animal knows. Every now and then there must be a cougar that hasn't heard that cougars don't attack human beings. And it's too late to report him after you've been surrounded in a permanent sort of way. Going down!

Tobin

"The fella," said the Elevator Man, "who can keep his head in such an emergency is also likely to save the animal's. It works the other way, too. Often an animal attacks merely because it's afraid. Without that fear it might have been only too glad to go on its way. Take that skunk in that New Jersey town the other day. A policeman found it on the street. The skunk got frightened and doused the cop with its own peculiar defense. The cop got frightened and shot the skunk. Almost like the east and the west, you might say. Lower main!

"What you need," said the Elevator Man "in a case like that is a cool head. Something like in that story of the two hikers who were taking a shortcut through a meadow. Suddenly one shouted, 'Quick, Joe, quick! There's a mad bull after us!' 'Now, now, don't panic,' says the other. 'Just give me a boost up this tree!'"

P.G.E. Extension Ceremonies Set

Official opening of the 82-mile Pacific Great Eastern Railway link between Quesnel and Prince George is set for Nov. 1, Premier W. A. C. Bennett announced today.

The inaugural run over the extension will be made by a special train carrying government and railway officials, municipal representatives and press and radio men.

Last spike in the line will be driven at Ahbau Creek at a special ceremony.

The official party, headed by Premier Bennett, president of the government-owned railroad, will leave Vancouver by steamship at 9.30 a.m. Friday, Oct. 31, for Squamish on Howe Sound, the line's southern terminus.

The train will arrive at Quesnel, previously the northern terminus, at 6.30 a.m. the next morning. It will start over the new extension at 7 a.m.

DRIVE LAST SPIKE

It will halt at Ahbau Creek, 25 miles north of Quesnel, for the spike-driving ceremony. L. G. Gunn of Prince George, and J. A. Fraser of Quesnel, two pioneer settlers, will drive the last spike.

The inaugural train will arrive at Prince George at 1 p.m., leaving on the return journey at 6 p.m. The party will reach Vancouver at 6.30 a.m. Sunday.

There will be between 75 and 80 tickets available to the general public at the P.G.E. office in Vancouver. Round trip fare, including berths, is $38.35.

Disobeyed Orders Led To Boyd Gang Escape

TORONTO, Oct. 22 (BUP).—Disobeyed orders paved the way for the spectacular Don jail escape by the notorious Edwin Alonzo Boyd gang last Sept. 8, a royal commission was told Tuesday.

Col. G. Hedley Basher, Ontario's deputy minister of reform institutions, said special orders issued after the gang's first escape in November, 1951, were not being carried out at the time of the second break which forced another nation-wide manhut for the gunmen.

Basher continued his story today.

Basher said he had ordered the men to be kept in the cellblock at all times except for exercise which was to be taken in the corridor outside their cells. He also ordered that all furniture be removed from the cellblock and that a solid door leading to the cellblock be kept open at all times so that the guard would have a clear view of the prisoners.

Contrary to his instructions, Basher said, the men were allowed to eat in the corridor outside their cells and were allowed there at other times in addition to the exercise period. The cellblock had been furnished with a table and a bench and the solid wooden door was not left open.

Garbage Disposal Economies Sought

Plow and Cover System Advocated Here; Fault Found With Present Cost Breakdown

A plow and cover system of garbage disposal which would save Greater Victoria muncipialities "$16,000 a year" was outlined before the inter-municipal committee Tuesday

It would eliminate the present method whereby garbage is brought to the city wharf and towed to sea.

Reeve Joseph Casey of Saanich stated the plow and cover system had been in experiment for the past two months. A private contractor, he said, offered to handle the job for the metropolitan areas at 60 cents a yard, compared to the 78 cents charged by the city.

The contractor would set up a burner two and a half miles from central receiving depot and city hall, the reeve stated.

Municipalities would use their own trucks to take garbage to the depot. From there the contractor would take it 12 miles out to a three-quarter mile long ravine in provincial territory, Reeve Casey said.

"We are now paying 78 cents a square yard to the city and the stuff is being washed back on the beaches," he stated.

A total of 90,000 yards of garbage passes through the city wharf now, of which about 66,000 yards is collected in the city.

Owing to extra mileage to the central depot Reeve Gibbs doubted if Oak Bay would save anything in the proposed change. The city would not make the full 18-cent a yard "paper" saving owing to loss of revenue from municipalities.

The committee decided to study the plan further.

COST PROTESTED

A breakdown of the city's garbage disposal costs, on which is based the 78 cent charge to municipalities, was protested by Ald. Robert Macmillan, Reeve Gibbs and Reeve Casey.

They considered the 10 per cent for depreciation and 25 per cent for loading, general supervision and unforseen expenditures too high. The breakdown was presented by City Manager Cecil Wyatt.

Ald. Macmillan submitted a statement of costs which was some $20,000 less than the $71,125 set by the city.

The meeting requested Ald. Macmillan to meet the manager to discuss possible revision and amendment of the cost breakdown.

Pacific Nickel is off .02 to .92, Quatsino is off .06 to .53. Silver Standard dropped .03 to 1.22, Silbak Premier is at .30 off .05. Estella hit a new low at .20 off .03. Coast Breweries is unchanged at $3.65.

Montreal

MONTREAL, Oct. 22 (CP)—Mixed adjustments ruled moderate trading late today on the stock exchange and curb market.

Changes followed a fractional price path with the exception of a point rise by Page-Hersey to 66.

Senior oils showed a broad list of declines and carriers and steels were also lower. Miscellaneous industrials and banks were generally firmer. Senior metals and utilities turned irregular while beverages and papers continued unchanged.

Included in the declines were Dominion Textile, Shawinigan, Consolidated Smelters, McColl-Frontenac, C.P.R. and Dominion Bridge. Royal Bank, Bell, Hudson Bay Mining, Gypsum and Industrial Acceptance sold at better prices.

New York

NEW YORK, Oct. 22 (AP)—A slow decline took the stock market down today in almost every division.

Changes in prices ranged down to between 1 and 2 points down to between one and two points with some going past that limit.

Volume was restricted to an estimated 1,100,000 shares, higher than yesterday's 990,000.

Railroads seldom fell more than a point.

Some of the larger losers were in coppers, oils, chemicals, radio-television issues, and miscellaneous manufacturers.

The decline was laid to the coal strike which effected a cautious attitude toward trading and aroused considerable nervousness.

Pacific Mills opened off 3½ at 25½ and then declined under further pressure. American Woolen declined between one and two points at times.

Toronto

TORONTO, Oct. 22 (CP)—Prices continued to decline sharply today toward the stock market's close as trading picked up.

Western oils declined steadily to lose more than two points on the exchange's index and strike a new low for the year. Base metals lost more than 1½ index points. Industrials and golds dropped similar amounts.

Volume for the session was expected to approach 2,000,000 shares.

Western oil losses outnumbered gains about seven to one and ranged to around 40 cents.

London

LONDON, Oct. 22 (Reuters)—A better sentiment prevailed in the stock market today but it did nothing towards boosting volume of business.

The better afternoon interest in gilt-edged issues was shown by both the institutions and the smaller-type investor resulting in a rise of approximately one-eighth in irredeemables.

Industrials were quietly mixed.

The turnover in foreign bonds was quietly firm most of the day, the section closing steady following further small offerings of Japanese.

Oils and shippings were lifeless.

Kaffirs were steady. Coppers finished about unchanged while diamonds were fractionally harder on Paris support.

Livestock

CALGARY, Oct. 22 (CP)—Trading was fairly active with bidding lower in spots, on the Calgary livestock market today. On offer were 1,800 cattle and calves, plus 18 carloads, with a heavy run of medium to plain stocker and feeder kinds, sows and calves, including some good cover-crop cattle.

Good and choice butcher steers, eligible for support, were fully steady, with old tops at $25.50 to $26, but light butcher steers and heifers were $1.50 to $2 lower. Good light cows were steady, heavy cows $1 to $2 lower. Bulls were steady.

BONDS

MONTREAL, Oct. 22 (CP).—Outside of a good demand for Newfoundland issues, the high-grade section of Montreal bond markets were quiet and unchanged today.

There was a little strength in convertibles on the corporate market. C.P.R. 3½ and Canadian Breweries were higher.

Boss, Worker In Round Table

Differences Aired in Toronto Talks; Need for Broadminded Approach Emphasized

By FORBES RHUDE, Canadian Press Business Editor

TORONTO, Oct. 22 (CP)—The Canadian Chamber of Commerce today discussed the "responsibilities of labor and management in economic education" and, as might be expected, produced some searching statements.

For instance, this from J. P. Nicol Jr., director of Canadian department of education and research, International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers:

"Sometimes I wonder if a union's preoccupation with money is not a reflection of a similar preoccupation on the part of the employer. Economics can be overstressed."

And from an employer or management side of the fence, J. R. White, Toronto, vice-president, Imperial Oil Ltd., said:

"The phrase, 'management and labor' seems to imply some inherent difference between the people who manage an entire factory or company, and those who manage its component parts and equipment.

"There are valid differences between management and other personnel, but they are differences of degree, and not of kind. To an increasing extent, management of industry is in the hands of people who sell their services either on a wage or salary basis—people who are, to use the phrase of Professor Slichter (of Harvard University), 'all members of the proletariat.'

"The assumption that management and labor are different kinds of people could lead us to assume that they have different responsibilities in regard to economic education.

Vital Need of Education Stressed

"Personally, I am of the old school which holds that there can be only one form of education worthy of the name—that which tells the truth. One contributes little to genuine education by merely presenting that part of the truth which appeals to the immediate interests of a particular group or section."

Mr. White also said:

"When we realize that many of the issues on which opinions are formed and elections fought are of the economic nature, the fact that some 95 per cent of the electorate lacks economic schooling is rather alarming. . . .

"On the whole, I believe that business should approach the theoretical side of economic education with a great deal of caution. There is a danger of assuming the mantle of prophet, and of telling people what they should think. Or, what is just as bad, the business man may create that impression."

Mr. Nicol, in his address, said:

"Any program of economic education must be primarily to the advantage of the individual to whom it is directed. If it is designed to 'sell' an employer point of view, the employee will shy away from 'buying.' There is much more to economics than a financial statement or an inventory position or an orders backlog. A narrow approach suggests a selfish motive. . . .

"Before we embark upon a program of economic education it might be worth while to conduct a painstaking inquiry into existing attitudes and their causes. Too much time and effort and money have been wasted in developing elaborate communication programs which have no relation whatever to the faulty conditions which inspired the programs.

GRAIN

WINNIPEG

WINNIPEG, Oct. 22 (CP).—Prices developed some hesitation and an easier tone in dull trade today on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, reflecting declines on U.S. grain and securitiy markets. Most prices closed at the low points of the day.

Commercial demand was not as aggressive as in recent sessions, while offerings were more liberal.

Shipper buying in oats and barley was believed in connection with domestic requirements. Further export buying was noted in the deferred contracts of barley.

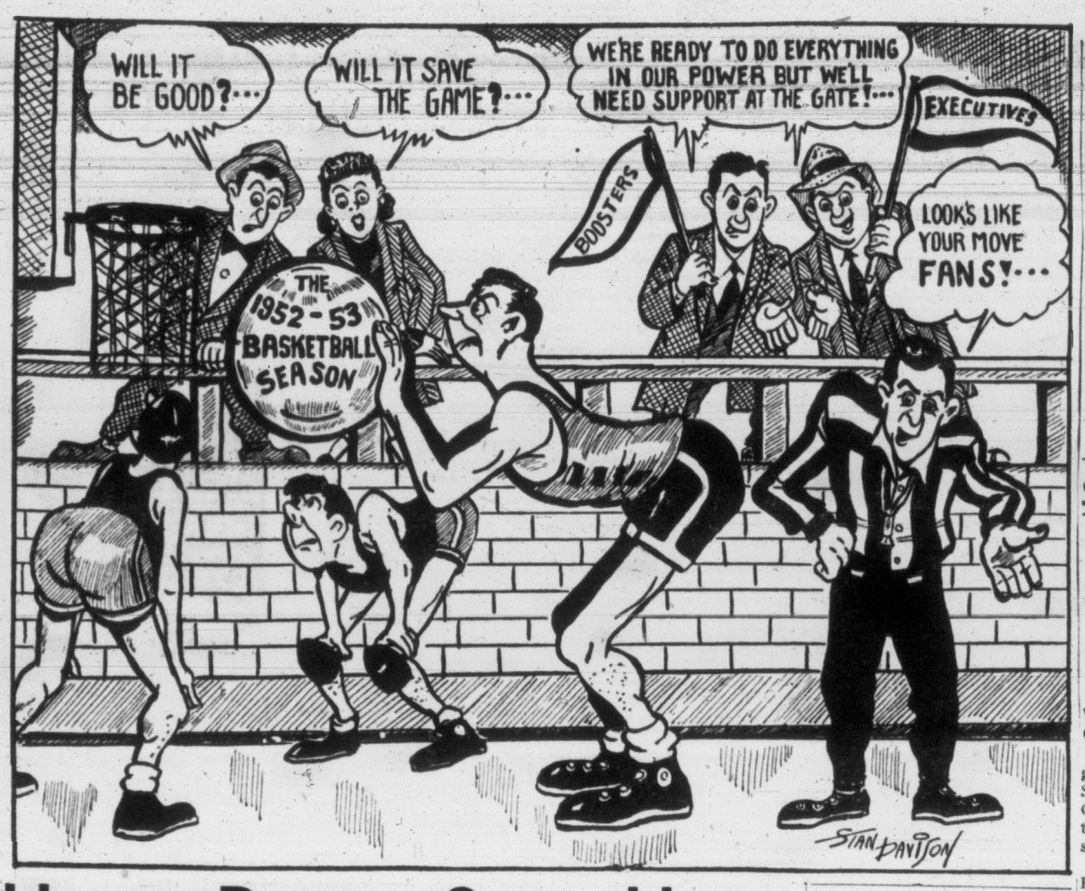
'French Is French' Says Quebec M.L.A.

QUEBEC CITY, Oct. 22 (BUP).—J. L. Richie, Canadian representative of the Federation of Manufacturers of Contractors' plant in Grantham, England, didn't parlez-vous it the right way yesterday.

He told the 33rd convention of the Canadian Good Roads Association he couldn't address delegates in French "because my French was learned in Paris and it might not be understood by French-Canadians here."

Quebec Provincial Roads Minister Antonio Talbot replied, stonily, that Laval University recently celebrated its centenary here. "The delegates from France's leading universities never needed transl



Coley's Canucks Capture Fourth Straight Victory

Quakers Edge Stampeders; Idle Cougars Now Third

The Western Hockey League schedule left Victoria Cougars out on a limb Tuesday night and Vancouver and Saskatoon sawed it off.

Cougars took quite a tumble from a first-place tie to third position. Canucks are all by themselves up-top while Quakers are the runners-up.

Here's how it came about:

With Cougars idle, Coleman E. Hall's Canucks whitewashed Edmonton Flyers 4-0, while Quakers hexed Calgary Stampeders 4-3 on a goal by Bill Heindl late in the third period.

This jumped Vancouver's points-earned total to 10 and Quakers' to nine. Victoria has eight.

SECOND SHUTOUT

The win was Canucks' fourth in a row and marked Emile Francis' second shutout of the season. They did all their scoring in the second period, getting three of their goals when they caught Flyers shorthanded on penalties.

Marksmen for Canucks were Ray Manson with two and Ed Leier and Les Hickey. Hugh Currie got two assists with the other helpers going to Lou Fontinato, Ian Mackintosh and Dick.

The game, played before 5,000 fans at Vancouver, opened Flyers' first coast swing of the W.H.L. season.

Victorious only once so far, they'll be trying for their second win tonight when they meet Seattle Bombers. Quakers will take over first place if they win at Calgary.

STAMP STREAK ENDED

At Saskatoon, it was Quakers' third win over Calgary in as many meetings and the reverse ended a three-game winning streak for Stamps.

Heindl's game-winner came unassisted at 17.19 of the third period. Other Saskatoon goals went to Howie Milford, Alex Kaleta and Alex Kuzma. Roy Kelly paced the Calgary scorers with two goals, Sid Finney getting the other.

The score was tied 1-1 at the end of the first period and 3-3 at the end of the second. Both clubs received brilliant goalkeeping in the fast encounter. Stamps pulled their goalie for the last 45 seconds, but couldn't break through for the tying marker.

FORMER N.H.L. STAR, Bud Poile will be at the helm Friday night when his Edmonton Flyers tackle Victoria Cougars in a Western Hockey League game at Memorial Arena. Poile will centre one line for the club that has won only one game this season. He is in his freshman year with Flyers, having coached in the Maritime League last year.

Hoop Prexy Sees Hope For Better Facilities

IT'S MY VIEW

By BILL WALKER, Sports Editor

Stanley "Busher" Jackson steps in where even angels fear to tread.

The former Domino star and several times Canadian champion is the man behind this year's city senior A men's basketball team.

The slender prematurely grey-haired forward has come out of temporary retirement to lend his part to the "revive basketball" campaign.

Walker

Busher will pull the strings on the strategy that for the ultimate could be a Canadian championship unit. And don't laugh, the city reps of the last couple of years weren't too far removed from at least provincial title calibre.

However, this championship stuff doesn't interest Jackson, not the Canadian variety this year, at any rate. That will come with effort.

Jackson is the type of a guy who, like manager Cec Garriott of Tyee fame, just won't have a place on his team for any player who won't hustle. You can bet your last button-hole on that one.

Yeh, you'll have to pull your weight on any team handled by the Busher. That's the way he played the game and we can speak from personal experience and contact on that one. And it's that calibre that produces champions. At least it did in the heyday of the Dominos, Jackson's heyday.

Real Cage Fans Will Remember

Jackson feels he can produce a hustling well-balanced squad of which the city can be proud. That's all anyone can ask in this age of basketball. And given such a team, there should be no lack of support by the city.

Saturday night the Vics—the name will probably stick until a better one comes along—make their home debut against Port Alberni.

The Ports have won the Island title for the past four years and, at present, are the reigning Island power in the senior A sport.

A tragic picture to Victoria, once the hottest bed of basketball when the Vic High Schoo rafters used to scream under the tension of those torrid tussles of the dirty thirties. Real cage fans will remember.

A small but valiant crew has been endeavouring to carry on in the interim. They have fallen short of their objective. And now the Busher steps in.

It's Still a Young Man's Game

He'll give it a whirl and a good one, but he can't do it alone. He realizes the need of youth. Youth and speed. Youth and hustle. Youth to blend with the experience of Bob Boyes, Johnny Clark, Elmer Curtis et al.

Basketball has always been a young man's game, unless you're in the class of the Harlem Globe Trotters or making a livelihood out of the sport.

No sentimentalist, Busher will give anyone a fair shake. Anyone, that is who wants to play basketball, and can show him they've got the urge, the desire, and the HUSTLE that will produce a winner.

So, let's give the guy a good send-off. And while you're at it, let's give the kids a hand, too. You haven't any loyalty to past champions if you don't.

* * *

Speaking of the new basketball rule which allows a second free shot if the first is missed, Wally Yeamans asserts that it will mean one point for every foul from now on. Most teams and players can hit for 50 per cent of their gift tosses. . . . Fouling should diminish as a result of the rule. . . .

* * *

Up-island cage fans take note: Don't be at all surprised that if, when Seattle's Chuck Durgan brings his Demolays (they may go under another name) to Alberni, a couple of well-known basketball twins are included in the line-up. . . . By any name they would be as sweet . . . that much can be said. . . . Don't say we didn't tell you, but Stan Jackson may also be in strip before the senior cage season is out. . . .

Bobby Horne took time out from peering at ailing bicuspids Tuesday to discuss frankly the problems facing him and the few who were trying to pump plasma into the limp basketball vein.

Horne, out of all this city, was the only man who volunteered to take over the presidential chair of the Victoria and District Basketball Association this year.

Admitting he had everything to learn and only his willingness to offer, Horne, a dentist by trade, agreed to turn his talents to filling the unexplainable cavity in basketball interest.

He said he would try to restore the sheen to the chipped enamel.

THE OTHERS

He is getting help from people like Frank Ireland, Pat Horgan, Bruce Robinson, Gordy Scott, Shirley Lewis and others, but it's just a few others.

"Sometimes," mused Horne, "there are so many problems facing us at once, I honestly wonder why I got myself into this. Then we begin to make a little headway and it all seems worthwhile.

"Naturally the thing we are most interested in now is getting away from Vic High. It's a good gym but it is just not equipped to handle city basketball and everyone in town knows it.

ENCOURAGNG RESPONSE

"The talk we had with the school board officials Monday night was the most encouraging indication he have had in weeks.

They listened to our case patiently and even offered further suggestions to our own plans. With their help I think we may get the use of the gym in the new high school in Esquimalt or possibly the junior high in Oak Bay when it is finished.

"Eventually we will have to build our own place.

In four or five years, basketball will officially be dead or it will have regained its popularity sufficiently so that we will be able to build our own gymnasium. Then, if anything goes wrong—bad weather, poor drawing teams, we will be responsible only to ourselves.

FUTURE BRIGHT

Horne admitted his new executive had run into a parcel of troubles since they took over—resignations, inability at times for the executive to get together, last minute schedule changes.

But he added that things were beginning to jell, what with the district league away this week and the Vancouver Island Senior A League scheduled to start Saturday night here with Busher Jackson's club meeting Port Alberni, last year's champs.

DEATH KNELL SOUNDED ON JUNIOR PUCK

VANCOUVER, Oct. 22 (BUP)—Eldon Seeney, commissioner of Pacific coast amateur hockey, said Tuesday that plans for a five-team junior hockey league on the coast have been shattered by "the greatest breach of promise I have ever experienced."

Seeney, who is also president of the New Westminster Minor Hockey Association, blames the Kerrisdale Minor Hockey Association for breaking up the projected league which was to comprise Victoria, Nanaimo, New Westminster and two clubs from Vancouver.

However, Seeney said, a three-team league will operate on the mainland—Forum, New Westminster and Kerrisdale.

Cubs, Senators Score Victories

Cubs trounced Royals, 6-2, in the opening game of the Victoria Midget Hockey League Tuesday night. Senators whipped Maroons, 5-3, in the other game.

Royals will meet Senators Thursday at 5 p.m., while Maroons and Capitals will tangle at 6 p.m. in juvenile games. All bantams and pee-wees should turn out Saturday morning for practice and team allotments.

STAMPS HOST ESKS

Football Semis Open Tonight

CALGARY, Oct. 22 (CP)—Western football fans are waiting with fingers crossed for tonight's opening game of the Western Inter-Provinical Football Union playoffs.

Edmonton Eskimos and Calgary Stampeders meet in Mewata Stadium, located near downtown Calgary, in the first game of a two-game, total-points semifinal series.

The winner takes on Winnipeg Blue Bombers in a best-of-three final.

The game will be the first playoff seen here since 1949, the year that marked the end of the Stampeders' rule of western football. Since then they've been out of the playoffs.

Perfect Indian summer weather has blessed western gridirons so far, but fans remember last year when the last scheduled game and two of the four playoff games were played in near-blizzards.

The long playoff grind and wear and tear on the players is a constant source of worry to coaches.

The winner of the western crown this year may play as many as 21 games before trotting out in Varsity Stadium in Toronto for a 60-minute shot at the Grey Cup.

If either of tonight's two contestants defeat Winnipeg, they'll have played at least 20, and possibly 21 games. Blue Bombers, who gained a bye into the finals, can get by on 18 or 19.

That's hard on the playing material, and has been called "suicide" for the west's Grey Cup chances.

TAKE YOUR CHOICE

Both teams will start tonight with most of the material in fairly good shape. The only strength missing will be Edmonton's lightning scatback, Jim Chambers, who is out with a shoulder separation.

The odds are about six-to-five and take your choice on the outcome.

JOINT DERBIES NOT IDEA OF ANGLERS' PREXY

President Wil Wilson of the Victoria Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association today denied there is a possibility of the V.S.I.A.A. and the Cowichan Bay Salmon Club sponsoring joint salmon derbies.

"There possibly was a misunderstanding," Wilson said, referring to the published statement that such a project was in the offing.

"I was referring to the joint efforts of the two clubs concerning problems that mutually affect us," he said. "Not derbies."

Tri-Services Plan Boxing, Hoop League

It has been announced by the naval information department at H.M.C.S. Dockyard that arrangements are being made by Navy, Army and Air Force sports committees to have tri-service leagues in basketball and boxing.

Teams that would take part in the plan are Gordon Head and Chilliwack army units, the R.C.A.F. base at Sea Island and R.C.N. at Esquimalt.

Tentative plans call for boxing championships to be held next March.

A further proposal calls for tri-service competition in skeet shooting, bowling and badminton although no definite plans have been made in regard to these sports.

Refs Must Be Pickin' On Poor Wings, Leafs

If Toronto's Conn Smythe and Detroit's Jack Adams get together today before the Leafs and Red Wings tangle at Maple Leaf Gardens you can bet they'll have plenty to talk about. And it's safe to say the subject will be the officiating in the National Hockey League.

Smythe and Adams have been shooting verbal barbs at Clarence Campbell, N.H.L. president, and referee-in-chief Carl Voss the last couple of weeks. It's a trifle tough to reconcile their reasoning.

The pair, who deplore sissies in the big-time play, are complaining that the get-tough policy of N.H.L. referees is making a farce of the game. They want less penalties and, in consequence, less whistle-tooting.

It so happens that Leaf and Red Wing players are the most penalized in the six-team league. The leader is that terrible-tempered Ted Lindsay of the Wings with 30 minutes and next is teammate Marcel Pronovost with 22.

Detroit, who has been winning games despite the parade to the penalty box, has had its players 136 minutes in the box and Leafs just 18 minutes less. The Wings set an all-time N.H.L. record of 25 penalties in one game when they first met this season and there's no reason to believe—no matter what their bosses think—that they'll act like little Lord Fauntleroys tonight.

The other game on tap is between Boston Bruins and the Rangers at New York. The blueshirts are the only club in the league without a victory and they are just about ruining the chances of Guelph Biltmores, Memorial Cup champions, in the bargain.

Rangers, hit badly down the middle with goalkeeper Chuck Rayner and centre Bones Raleigh out with injuries and pivotman Edgar Laprade deciding to stick to his sporting goods store business in Port Arthur, have called up replacements from Guelph.

Dean Prentice left by plane Tuesday for New York to join teammates Andy Bathgate, Harry Howell and Ron Murphy who moved up a week ago on a three-game trial basis.

Vic High, Bays Score Soccer Wins

Margins of victory were scant Tuesday in opening games of the Inter-High School Junior Soccer League.

In the three opening matches, Mount View opened fast with two goals in the first five minutes. Larry Alexander pumped in Mount View's goal after two minutes, but Don Hamilton, Mount Doug captain, replied three minutes later. There was no further scoring.

Bud Shipley engineered a goal in each half to give Oak Bay its victory over Golds, and Gill Kendall was the only scorer in the Esquimalt victory over Blacks.

U.S. Davis Cup Team No Patch on Aussies

NEW YORK, Oct. 22 (UP).—The United States will bid to regain the Davis Cup from Australia with its weakest team in years.

That point was indicated Tuesday night when the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association announced the selection of Vic Seixas of Philadelphia, Hamilton Richardson of Baton Rouge, La., and Straight Clark of Pasadena, Calif., to the team that will travel to Australia.

Seixas, 29-year-old Davis Cup playing captain and America's top-ranked player, is the only member of the U.S. team rated even an outside chance of beating Aussie aces Frank Sedgman and Ken McGregor.

Richardson, an 18-year-old sophomore at Tulane, is ranked ninth in the U.S., and the 27-year-old Clark is ranked 11th.

The U.S. challenge is believed strong enough to dispose of the European zone champion in the inter-zone final at Sydney, December 18-20. The European zone title still must be settled between Italy and India.

Assuming that the U.S. will beat the European champion, there were few who gave the Americans any semblance of a chance against the talented Australians in the challenge round at Adelaide, December 29-31. Sedgman, McGregor, Mervyn Rose and Ken Rosewall beat the best available U.S. players consistenly last summer in American tournaments.

"UNAVAILABLE" STARS

The U.S.'s near-bankrupt tennis predicament, as far as the Davis Cup is concerned, was brought about by the unavailability of several ranking American players.

Dick Savitt of Orange, N.J., ranked second in the U.S., incurred the disfavor of the tennis fathers by popping off in Australia last year and announced that he would "not be available" this year.

Tony Trabert of Cincinnati, O., America's third-ranked star, is in the navy. Herb Flam of Beverly Hills, Calif., ranked fifth, is subject to a draft summons shortly and cannot leave his studies at U.C.L.A. to play in the Davis Cup matches.

Oldsters like Gardnar Mulloy of Coral Gables, Fla., who reached the final of the U.S. national singles tourney but was trimmed by Sedgman; and Ted Schroeder of La Crescenta, Calif., and Billy Talbert of New York are either unavailable or past their peak.

BUT LOOK! THIS TV SET IS A COMBINATION JOB

Giving away television sets at hockey games is becoming a habit in Victoria, and the Victoria Minor Hockey Association is making a bid to show them all how.

At Minor Hockey Night, Dec. 10, top door prize will be a combination television set, radio and phonograph. With a 17-inch screen, the set is valued at $750, and will be installed in the home of the winner.

The association has decided to share the bounty from the night, which was a great success last year. It has been revealed by officials that sale of all programs that night would be given to the Queen Alexandra Solarium.

Other door prizes will be a mixmaster set, a pop-up toaster and a mirror.

Jockey Claims He Rode Blind Horse

TOWSON, Md., Oct. 22 (AP).—Jockey Howard Hall has sued for $90,000, charging he was sent out to ride a blind horse.

The jockey's suit is against Mr. and Mrs. Leonard M. Carver and Ellaine C. Perigoy of Baltimore, owners and trainer of a horse named Chalglass.

Hall was the jockey of Chaltime had a disease which made the horse wheeled to the left after breaking from the starting gate, bolted into another horse, struck the inside rail, and threw the jockey.

Hall charged the horse at the time had a desease which made it practically blind in both eyes. He alleges he received a number of serious injuries, including a permanently paralyzed arm.

WEDNESDAY QUARTERBACK

'Depth' Peg's Long Suit

After listening to Saturday night's broadcast of the Winnipeg Blue Bombers-Calgary Stampeders Canadian football game my hopes of a western victory in the Canadian championship east-west Grey Cup finals began to soar for the first time this autumn.

The Western Interprovincial Football Union Conference is over for another season. Only games left are the semifinal romps between Calgary and Edmonton (a total point, two-game series) to see who will advance against the league champion Bombers for the right to journey east.

But any of you who listened to the broadcast Saturday night must have been convinced by the way the Winnipeg squad toyed with the Stampeders to win going away, 42-18, that it will take a great eastern team to stop the blue and gold machine.

In my inaugural column I listed some very important obstacles that always face a western team in search of the Grey Cup. These were, in part, the long layoff between the end of the Western Conference and when the east had declared a winner; the long train journey, and the inability of the western squad to practice outdoors usually because of severe Prairie weather.

However, I inadvertently omitted to list what is generally the prime reason for eastern teams winning all but five Grey Cup finals since 1892—lack of western depth.

Anyone familiar with east-west playoffs will remember for the most part that western teams usually hold their own for the first 30 minutes, sometimes even until the third quarter.

But in the final minutes, with both teams drawing upon their reserves, it is then that the east strikes hard, fast and usually for the winning points through a weary and battered western squad.

But—barring injuries to key players—Bombers of 1952 have just about everything. Especially, they have depth to burn.

The Blue and Gold, gentlemen, will win the Western Conference by defeating Edmonton Eskimos who will defeat Calgary. . . .

The way Toronto Argos beat Ottawa Roughriders, 25-6, over the week-end should pretty well put them into the playoffs against Hamilton Ti-Cats. In fact, I think they should prove too powerful for the Hamiltonians in the semis. Last week-end the double blue learned a thing or three about never letting up until the final gun. And this is all they needed.

* * *

After four week-ends with crowds ranging from 1,200 to more than 1,500 at Heywood Avenue Park I'm beginning to wonder how long the day will be before Victorians will be treated to watching the home-towners playing against the mainland's best juniors.

With the backing of the fans it should not be too much to expect that some day the island will be able to field a team that can win the B.C. championship and advance to the C.R.U. playdowns for the junior championship of Canada.

Ambitious, yes—but tremendously wonderful to think about.

WRATHFUL LEAFS PUT IT ON LINE TO PROVE BEEF

TORONTO, Oct. 22 (BUP)—The Toronto Maple Leafs will gamble $500 to prove that referee George Gravel called it wrong last Thursday at Boston when the Bruins' Leo Labine and the Leafs' Tod Sloan mixed in a stick-swinging duel, managing director Conn Smythe announced today.

He said a formal protest, and the $500 it costs to make it, would be sent to the National Hockey League headquarters in Montreal as soon as the Leafs prepared their case. Lawyer Ian Johnston took statements Tuesday from Leaf players who saw the fracas.

WOMEN'S COMPETITION FIERCE

'Babe' One Of The Girls Now

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK, Oct. 22 (AP)—The professional women golfers of the United States now are whacking up more prize money each year than their male counterparts did in 1936. Six of them will average better than $10,000 a piece this year, plus whatever additional they pick up from sporting goods firms whose equipment they use.

It sounds like a fine new career has opened up for the country's pretties. The hours are good and the task of playing at the swankier clubs around the land is not too strenuous. Before rushing out to buy the daughter a set of clubs, however, it might be well to listen briefly to Freddie Corcoran, who invented playing golf for money.

"The competition among the five or six top girls has become fierce lately," he said. "A few years ago Babe Didrikson (Zaharias) was in a class by herself. She won most of the money and others took what was left. It's tightened up now to where the Babe is just one of the girls.

"They've done away entirely with women's par. Louise Suggs shot 284 to win this year's open—an average of 71 strokes to the round. Patty Berg shot a 64 on one course to break the men's record by a stroke. One 54-hole tournament was won with a score of 211. Betsy Rawls, who led the money winners with a total of over $14,000, is a good bet to equal men's par any time she goes out."

We observed that Freddie was sticking to the well-known names, and asked what the chances were for some new girls to break into the picture in the near future.

IMPROVEMENT NOTED

"It's a different situation with the girls," he said. "We have seven former women's amateur champions in our group, and they've been playing one another in hard competition for several years now. They've improved their games tremendously in that time . . .

"No matter how good a girl might be as an amateur, she simply can't get this kind of competition. After she joins our group it will take her some time to bring her game up to the tournament pitch of the original bunch and begin getting her share of the money."

In other words, it does not sound like a really quick road to riches, and we have decided reluctantly to leave the older child in school for another year or two.

BASEBALL HAS BEEN GOOD TO DUROCHER

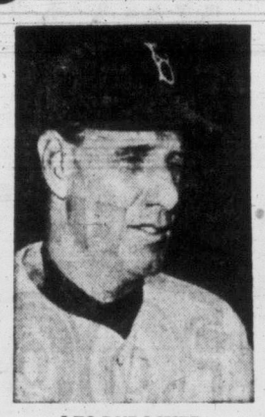
No Lights for Leo

SANTA MONICA, Calif., Oct. 22 (UP) — Leo Durocher has had some "tempting" offers to go into motion picture production work but the New York Giants' manager said today he wasn't ready yet to quit baseball.

"There's no question about my being back with the Giants next year," Durocher said. "I'm under contract and I intend to live up to my contract."

Durocher said he had received offers to go into production work in both movies and television and might "eventually" enter those fields.

"Don't get the idea that I'm looking for a spot as an actor," Durocher said in commenting on his recent appearance in film being made which stars Tallulah Bankhead.



LEO DUROCHER
. . . 'druther play ball

"It was a lot of fun but I'm not an actor."

The Giants' pilot said the only reason he would leave baseball would be so that he could spend more time with his family.

"Baseball," said Leo, "has been very good to me."

Earlier Durocher had said that he was definitely interested in the movie business, adding that his family must be taken into consideration. "I don't like moving them from New York to California and back to New York."

However, his present plans are to stick with the diamond sport at least until the success or failure of his present film is known.

GOGIE LEADS WALLY BY ONE

In four matches Stewart has connected for seven goals, to lead Victoria United's playing coach Wally Milligan by one goal. Milligan, recently injured, has played one game less than Stewart.

In third place is Ivan Carr of Royals with four goals while Harry Smith of Firefighters has three.

Britain's Randy Turpin Still Winning Titles

LONDON, Oct. 22 (AP).—Britain's Randolph Turpin won the Empire middleweight boxing championship at Harringway Arena Tuesday, outpointing George Angelo of South Africa by a wide margin in a dreary 15-round bout.

The title became vacant when champion Dave Sands of Australia was killed in a truck crash.

Turpin now holds four championships. He is British middle and light-heavyweight titleholder and European middleweight champion. He formerly was world middleweight champion.

Turpin, superbly fit, did not show up at his best against the back-pedalling Angelo. Turpin weighed 158¼, Angelo 157¾.

Turpin, although dishing out punishment with his left hook to the head and crushing rights to the body, could never nail Angelo for the pay-off punch.

The 10,700 capacity crowd frequently broke into a slow handclap and in the 13th round Referee Sam Russell called for more action from each fighter. Then Angelo went down from a flurry of blows but was up before a count.

Terry Allen of London, former world flyweight champion, took over another vacant title when he won the British flyweight crown with a sixth-round technical knockout over Eric Marsden of Lancashire. Allen weighed 111½ and Marsden 110½.

Burnaby Lake Still Choice For Sculling

BURNABY, B.C., Oct. 22 (CP)—Burnaby Lake is still considered the first choice for British Empire Games rowing events.

The Burnaby council has been advised by the executive of the British Empire Games Society that Burnaby Lake will be chosen if necessary funds can be raised.

The appropriation for staging swim events, however, has been cut from $430,000 to $30,000.

The B.E.G. committee wants an appropriation from the municipality, but no decision will be made until a meeting of a joint committee of council and the North and South Burnaby Boards of Trade.

Previously, the joint committee indicated that development of Burnaby Lake—estimated to cost $430,000—should be undertaken on a metropolitan basis with government assistance.

Pats Lose Puck Lead

Regina Pats stopped at quittin' time Tuesday night and it cost them their lofty perch in the Western Canada Junior Hockey League.

The potent Pats, who had played overtime, winning two and tying one, in their three previous starts, dropped a 4-2 decision to Lethbridge Native Sons in regulation time at Lethbridge and the loss dropped Regina into second place, a point behind the Native Sons.

Meanwhile, Calgary Buffaloes poured in four third-period goals to send Moose Jaw Canucks away smarting from a 7-4 loss, their fourth in five starts. Buffs moved up with Regina with the win.

Freshman Issue Could End Football at U.B.C.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 22 (BUP).—The senate of the University of British Columbia will soon decide whether to enforce the freshman-transfer athletic ineligibility ruling which could doom football at the university.

The senate, in special session, will consider a motion of the student council to postpone putting the ruling into effect. It was passed last March and forbids any freshman to play on a senior squad.

The council asked the postponement until there are adequate recreational facilities and coaches for freshmen.

Enforcement of the ruling, many felt, would deprive the university of a football team.

They pointed out that this year's squad is composed of only 11 veterans, the rest being freshmen who would be ineligible to play if the ruling were in force.

It was also reported that coach Jelly Anderson would not return next year if the ruling went in.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Oct. 22 (AP)—Buffalo Bisons of the American Hockey League Tuesday gave high-scoring Ab De Marco his unconditional release and announced that he would become the club's chief scout in Canada. De Marco plans to play amateur hockey for a North Bay, Ont., team.

Indian Sport and Art Sure Magnet For Tourist Trade, Says Historian

Victoria and its publicity agencies are failing to develop one of the greatest opportunities to make the city and Vancouver Island famous throughout the world, Bruce McKelvie, veteran British Columbia newspaperman and historian, told a luncheon meeting of the Kiwanis Club Tuesday.

Mr. McKelvie referred to the British Columbia Indians, their colorful arts and dances, totem carvings, their water sports and food preparations.

"They are the historical background of our province, and they offer one of the greatest appeals to visitors," he said.

He said he was in accord with a recent suggestion offered by Russel Potter of the Workmen's Compensation Board, who thought this area could be the scene of an annual one-week Indian show which would feature British Columbia Indians, their arts and culture.

An annual celebration of this kind would attract many thousands of visitors to this island," Mr. McKelvie said.

He said the thousands of tourists who watched Mungo Martin, totem pole carver, at work at Thunderbird Park this summer, proved that Indian art and culture appealed to visitors.

"During two days last August 2,400 persons, mostly tourists, stopped to watch Mungo at his work," said Mr. McKelvie.

We are offering this unique car at the same price that you would have to pay for a similar car with perhaps 30,000 miles on it.

It is a streamlined two-door sedan with HYDRAMATIC DRIVE, custom heater and many other extras. The price is nearly $1,000 off its new price. You can have it for only $850 down, but you must act quickly . . . very quickly . . . and see it either at 900 Fort St. or 920 Yates St., or phone G 8154 or G 8342.

CHANGE IN ACT APPROVED

Arts Centre Grants Discussed

Inter-municipal committee Tuesday approved drafting of an amendment to the Municipal Act or a public act to permit municipalities to make grants to Greater Victoria Arts Centre.

The city and Oak Bay agreed to contribute if a change were made allowing them to do so legally. Saanich council said it could not make a grant. Esquimalt wanted the amendment through before making a decision.

It was felt 1953 councils might look favorably on the suggestion to provide jointly up to $3,000 annually for Centre maintenance, once the amendment is enacted.

'HORSES OUT OF SAME STABLE'

Russians Told to Expect Worst No Matter Who Wins U.S. Vote

By EDWARD E. BOMAR

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (AP) — Moscow is telling the Russian people to expect the worst no matter who wins the United States presidential election. To a Communist, one candidate is just as about as bad as the other.

This has been the Soviet line all along, that both major parties and their candidates "obey the will of American multi-millionaires." A Soviet domestic radio broadcast, reported today by U.S. government monitors, brought the Russians up to date on the election campaign. It was a commentary by Valentin Zorin, Moscow's nominee expert on American affairs.

The U.S. elections, said Zorin, "resemble a race in which all horses come out of the same stable, the owner of which will win regardless of which horse comes in first."

"In fact," he added, "whichever of the two bourgeois parties wins the election, their master, big capital, will win.

"Furthermore, election skirmishes between the two parties are being used by propaganda to deflect the attention of the masses from vital problems of present-day America and to conceal the bargain struck by the two parties on the main problems."

Governor Adlai Stevenson, the Russians were told, is a millionaire, who is backed by big Chicago banks and has connections with "such large New York concerns as Standard Oil, Aluminum Company of America, and others."

Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, according to Zorin, advanced slowly in his military career until after he became aide to Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Escapee From Oakalla Prison Farm Captured

VANCOUVER, Oct. 22 (BUP) —Oscar Morin, 25-year-old French Canadian who escaped from the Oakalla prison farm last Friday, faced charges of escaping from custody today after being arrested Tuesday by two officers in Vancouver.

Detectives Don McDonald and Don Ross spotted Morin as he entered a beer parlor. Morin did not resist arrest. He had been serving a one-year term for theft when he broke away from a work gang Friday.

U.S. Warship Hit Twice By Shore Guns, Seven Die

TOKYO, Oct. 22 (UP).—Communist shore batteries scored two direct hits on the destroyer-escort U.S.S. Lewis off Wonsan on the Korean east coast Sunday, killing seven men and wounding one.

The Lewis was steaming to the aid of two Korean minesweepers under fire from four to six enemy shore guns when hit.

The first shell accounted for the seven dead. It plowed into the forward fire room on the starboard side, piercing the vessel's No. 1 boiler. The shell failed to explode and later was tossed overboard.

The second shell hit the main deck on the port side and exploded. Shrapnel slightly wounded one man.

...in my opinion

says John Fisher
... distinguished broadcaster and lecturer
... noted for his deep and inspiring Canadianism

Canadians are fortunate people. We eat better, dress better, live better than most other humans on this old globe. We are developing at an unprecedented pace, and we are only getting started.

It isn't all just luck, either. Canadians don't scare at a hard day's work. We are ready to use our muscles and brains. We know enough to get ready for the greater things to come — to save today to be prepared for tomorrow.

What's more, we are determined believers in freedom — personal freedom as well as national — personal progress as well as national progress — and that, my friends, puts a load of responsibility on each one of us.

It means that we must be ready for opportunities as well as emergencies — be ready to help ourselves individually as well as nationally. Canada calls on us as citizens to show faith in our future — to invest in her. She even shows us how to help by helping ourselves — Canada is selling nest eggs.

Canada has a painless, profitable plan for producing nest eggs. We call them CANADA SAVINGS BONDS. These bonds stretch like a bridge between country and citizen. They demonstrate the democratic way. We can buy them like groceries when we want to, or ignore them. Behind these bonds are people — not policemen.

Canada Savings Bonds are safer than money in the pocket. We are more likely to keep a $100 bond than a $100 bill. And the longer we keep it, the more it pays. Everyday it works for Canada. Later it will work for us — as earnings or education, gadgets or garages, investment or invention, plans or piggy bank. A wise nation is a thrifty nation.

IN MY OPINION there is no better way to save than with CANADA SAVINGS BONDS.
If we need the cash we can cash them at a moment's notice at full value plus interest. This is about as close to having your cake and eating it, too, as I know of. It's patriotism with a privilege. And a Canada Savings Bond is your investment in your freedom.

U.S. Citizens in Canada Can Collect Pensions

By DICK BROME

OTTAWA, Oct. 22 (BUP).—U.S. citizens and dual U.S.-Canadian citizens will be able to collect family allowances and old age pensions in this country without losing their U.S. rights under the McCarran Act, officials here said today.

The controversial new act, passed over President Truman's veto, takes effect Dec. 24.

It will affect the U.S. standing of uncounted hundreds of dual citizens and tighten some rules governing naturalized U.S. citizens who move out of the country after getting their citizenship.

But U.S. officials said the bill will have little direct effect on U.S. citizens living in Canada, or Canadians planning to go to the United States either as immigrants or students.

Recent reports that acceptance of family allowances and pensions would mean the loss of U.S. citizenship to Americans living in Canada were emphatically denied. The reports caused a flurry of inquiries to U.S. consulates across the country.

"Citizens of the U.S. who accept the benefits of citizenship of another country are in danger of losing their rights as U.S. citizens," U.S. spokesmen here said. "Family allowances and old age pensions in Canada are paid to all residents who qualify for them.

"It is not required by the Canadian government that a recipient be a Canadian citizen and therefore they are benefits to residence and not of citizenship."

Under the McCarran Act Canadians and South Americans will still be classed as non-quota immigrants.

Thus Canadians wishing to emigrate to the U.S. will be accorded approximately the same opportunities to cross the border as at present.

U.S. citizens will be able to serve in Canadian military forces only if they get specific permission from the U.S. Secretary of State. Americans who vote in Canadian political elections or accept government or civic posts that require Canadian nationality or an oath of allegiance to Canada, would be in danger of losing their right to return to the U.S. as citizens.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1952

BETWEEN TIMES

By MONTE ROBERTS

I won't guarantee this dodge will work in Victoria, but it did in Boston.

Under the windshield of a car parked beside a no-parking sign was a note: "Officer—my battery has gone dead. Cannot move car. Back soon."

As a passer-by was reading the message, two girls arrived, removed the note, opened the car door, stepped on the starter and drove away.

Even the most casual reader cannot escape noting the fact it is open season for political campaigns.

We have an aldermanic election in Victoria, a couple of by-elections in British Columbia, and, I understand, there is some sort of a reasonably important election coming off south of the border.

Well, for the guidance of all those running for election everywhere, I wish to present a few sure-fire campaign speeches.

As follows:

Campaign Speech Number One: "Yes, dad, I know I didn't get very good marks last term, but gee, dad, I'm really going to settle down and work hard.

"I am going to crack the books two hours a night—maybe three hours—from now on in, and I'll get at least second class marks for sure, even first class if that ole McGillicudy doesn't make the math too tough.

"But you know, dad, a man can't work ALL the time, and a man has to have SOME relaxation, so how's about tonight, huh, dad?

"Gee, dad, Spike's got these two tickets to the Cougars' game, see, an' we won't be a bit after eleven gettin' home—well not later than 11.30—and like I said, a man who is working as hard as I am. . . .

"Aw, thanks, dad. Er . . . could you spare about four-bits for a milk shake?"

Campaign Speech Number Two: "Well, it was like this, officer—I was just drifting along, thinking of something else, and I didn't know the speedometer was over thirty, and . . ."

Campaign Speech Number Three: "Why, certainly, Louise, I'll fix that broken step just as soon as I've finished this chapter of The Caine Mutiny. Of course I will, Louise, I have the spikes and hammer and everything all ready . . . say, have you been reading The Caine Mutiny? It gets real exciting right now . . . here, look over my shoulder, this fellow, see, has been . . . "

Campaign Speech Number Four: "Honestly, I'm not fooling, George. That's what she said. She said she never, never, NEVER, saw a man wear a dinner jacket in such a distinguished way, as you did, George, six years ago at the dinner dance.

"No, really, George, you haven't gained an OUNCE since then, and I'm sure you'll look even better, with that dash of distinguished grey at your temples.

Oh, I just know you'll make me the envy of every other woman there, George. And tickets are only $5 a couple, so . . ."

Campaign Speech Number Five: "It's just that I've been working so hard lately . . . of course I'm interested in what happened to Aunt Christie . . . but I AM tired . . . I tell you I am VERY interested . . . very . . . ver' in'rested . . . zzzzzZZZZZ."

HIS ROADS REMAIN AS MONUMENT

Native Son of Cariboo Mapped B.C. Expansion

By LESLIE FOX

Ernest Crawford Carson will go down in B.C.'s history books as the man who modernized the province's highways in the greatest road-building program it has known.

But to literally thousands he will be remembered as a quiet, unassuming man who mixed a rock-like firmness, bred in the rugged plateau of the Cariboo, with a gentle politeness that made everyone call him "Ernie, my friend."

As typically British Columbian as a man could be, Ernie Carson was born June 9, 1894, at his father's ranch on Pavilion Mountain which overlooks the rolling cattle plains of the Cariboo. Here he grew up, nurtured by the pioneer spirit of his family which dated back to the gold rush days. He could match strides with the top cow hands of the country and knew the delights of wresting a livelihood from the rugged land.

After a three-year stint with the Canadian Expeditionary Force in the Great War, he married Halcyon Hills of New Denver, B.C., in 1921 and settled down to running the great ranch at Pavilion. Some years later he operated a general store and gas station on the Cariboo Highway.

Politics first attracted him in 1928, when at 34 he captured the Lillooet riding for the late Dr. S. F. Tolmie's Conservative party. He chose that political philosophy although his elder brother, Robert, espoused the Liberal cause.

His apprenticeship was served as a back-bencher then as Conservative whip. On both sides of the House he made lasting friends.

The Conservative debacle of 1933 ended his public career temporarily, but he continued to fight for the best interests of his riding and came back to the House in the wartime election of 1941.

This time he and his brother, representing Kamloops, symbolized the new relationship of Coalition, sinking their political differences to sit on the same side of the House. Ultimately, one of them, Ernie, joined the cabinet, the other Robert, became Speaker of the House.

Ernie was picked by the then Conservative leader, R. L. Maitland, K.C., for his first cabinet job in 1942, taking the trade and industry and mines portfolio on appointment by Premier John Hart. His particular love in this task was the government travel bureau which he launched on movie-making for publicity purposes as the keynote of an expansion which was to make B.C. ready to capture an enormous share of the postwar travel.

Maitland died in 1946 and in the ensuing cabinet rearrangement, Ernie succeeded Herbert Anscomb as minister of public works.

Knew His Country's Need

It was a fortuitous choice for British Columbia. Carson knew the province like the back of his hand. From years of weary traveling over the washboard and gumbo roads of the vast interior he knew the province could never achieve its destiny without highways on the modern scale. And he well knew that B.C. had the toughest road building country on the continent.

That was why he revolutionized B.C.'s old line thinking on highway building, why he refused to go along with the political juggery of wasting millions building back roads to cadge the votes of a few settlers.

"Build the main highways first and the added business resulting will provide the money for the back roads" was his policy. Against consistent pressure in the legislature he stuck to this in his quiet way, poured more than $100,000,000 during his six-year ministerial span into streamlining the trunk roads.

The vastly-important Hope-Princeton highway was built, the first time B.C. had ever presented a completely paved modern highway to the public at first asking. The long-awaited Hart highway to the Peace River was pushed through, and on Vancouver Island, along the Trans-Canada Highway, the southern Trans-Provincial, the Cariboo and northern highway hundreds of miles of 24-foot black top began appearing as if by magic.

In the midst of it was Ernie Carson. He purchased the first airplane used by the public works department, so that he and his top engineers could hop from job to job hundreds of miles apart, exhorting contractors, trouble-shooting, planning the next moves, so that the big highway job would go through on time.

Aware that he had a heart condition, Ernie Carson refused to let it interfere with his highway tasks. He piled up a record of well over 100,000 miles, by plane, by car, even by jeep and tractor over unbuilt road sections.

His Engineers Shed Tears

His road inspection trips were legend in the department. He was on the go 15 to 20 hours a day at the height of the road program, catching only enough sleep to be ready for another gruelling day.

Such a performance inspired the intense loyalty and affection of the hundreds in the department who caught his crusading spirit. It is a recorded fact that hard-boiled highway engineers broke down and wept when they said good-bye to him last February when the exigencies of politics meant that he must follow his leader Herbert Anscomb out of the government and leave the works department he so loved.

There were some who thought he might stay with the Coalition when Premier Byron Johnson and Tory leader Anscomb parted company, just so he could finish the highway task. But Ernie Carson had the same type of loyalty he inspired in others. His leader had been fired so he would go, too.

It was this same characteristic which prevented him from making even the slightest move toward the leadership of the party so long as Anscomb remained at its head, although there were strong pressure movements to persuade him.

Had he lived, it is quite possible he would have become the leader now that Anscomb has announced his intention to retire. He had already been chosen House leader of the four Conservative M.L.A.'s left after the June 12 election.

In the Legislature Ernie Carson was always quietly spoken, with a matter of fact manner which disarmed his political opponents. He was in his element each year when members had their day of putting their road demands before the minister because he knew their needs better than they did themselves. Only once or twice during his 17 or 18 sessions was he seen to get angry and make a cutting speech against his opponents.

Hidden Identity His Joke

His good-natured humor made him a host of friends entirely apart from his political life.

One of his favorite jokes during a motor trip was to slip into a gas station and ask the attendant what he thought of the roads in those parts.

He'd listen attentively while a broadside was directed at "that guy Carson" for not fixing up some little local problem, then he would carry on without ever revealing his identity.

A few years ago, while returning from an official visit up the Island he was stopped by a patrol officer on Gorge Road for traveling a few miles above the 30 speed limit.

The officer did not recognize the name on the license and Ernie made no mention who he was, accepted the ticket and immediately went down to the station and entered a guilty plea along with a cheque to cover the fine. The police officer never did know who he'd pinched.

Since they came to live in Victoria a decade ago Mr. and Mrs. Carson interested themselves in scores of local community doings and made a host of new friends. Mr. Carson devoted much time to the St. John Ambulance Association, of which he was provincial president several times.

His favorite relaxation, when he could get away which was not often, was to go fishing in his Cariboo country. Sometimes he could forget politics digging in the garden of his Mount Joy Avenue home, which he was doing when death overcame him.

FOUR FOILED BY FISHERMAN FLEE IN FOG

Four youths, figuring they were well-protected by the heavy blanket of fog shrouding the city early today, fled when surprised in the act of stealing wheels off a transfer truck.

H. A. Barnett, of Central Transfer, 640 Montreal, told A-Sgt. Robert Mair of the city police that commercial fisherman J. Fernio spotted the youths taking off the rear wheels of a truck on his firm's James Bay property. On hearing him approach they jumped a fence and vanished.

Victoria Firm Wins Harbor Dredging Job

Island Tug & Barge Starts Work Soon

A local firm has been awarded the contract for dredging Victoria's upper harbor area.

Island Tug & Barge Ltd. received notice from the federal government's public works department Tuesday night, informing it that its tender for the job had been accepted and to proceed at once.

Company president H. B. Elworthy said today he expected to begin the task within two or three weeks.

The work was given in two contracts. One calls for dredging the upper reaches of the Inner Harbor, from Johnson Street bridge to Point Ellice bridge, to a depth of 20 feet, and the other, for dredging the lower half of Selkirk Water, from Point Ellice bridge to the C.N.R. trestle, to a depth of 15 feet.

Mr. Elworthy said more than 1,000 yards of rock and 97,500 cubic yards of mud and sand would have to be moved from the Inner Harbor basin, and 114,500 yards of sludge from the Selkirk Water area.

STRAIGHTEN SEABOARD

The company president said it was the intention of his firm to straighten out the harbor waterfront with the material that is dredged, rather than take it out to sea and dump it.

"We are quite prepared to reclaim land for waterfront propert yowners," Mr. Elworthy said. "All they will have to do is build a retaining wall and we will fill in behind it."

A special jet pump is being sent here which will spread the silt in such a manner that the reclaimed land will be level, and not hilly.

Word of the dredging project was received with enthusiasm by members of the harbor development committee of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

J. R. Genge, chairman of the harbor group, said: "This is what we have been waiting for a long time. The fact that a local company has been awarded the job makes it all the better."

The main basin of the Inner Harbor, known as the lower harbor, was dredged two years ago.

Fishing Industry's Token of Regard

Just before the designated Ambassador to Japan, Hon. R. W. Mayhew, left his office of fisheries minister at Ottawa he was presented with an engraved cigarette case . . . a leaping salmon on its face. The gift was a token of appreciation from the Fisheries Association of B.C., the Vancouver Wholesale Fish Dealers' Association and other associations holding membership in the Fisheries Council of Canada. Mr. Mayhew was pleased as he received the gift from Gordon O'Brien, right, manager of the Fisheries Council.

JANICE BACON

GERALD MAIN

Two Victoria Students at U.B.C. Honored

Two Victoria students at University of B.C. have won awards of $200 each for outstandiang achievement in their respective fields.

Janice Myrtle Bacon, 2720 Asquith Street, has been given the University Scholarship in Nursing and Health for proficiency in the first year.

Gerald C. Main, 3003 Foul Bay Road, has received the Flying Officer George Pringle Memorial Bursary for good standing and participation in student affairs.

Miss Bacon last year received a $100 Lions Club scholarship and a share in a Chris Spencer bursary for outstanding achievement at Victoria College, where she outclassed everyone in chemistry and biology.

Mr. Main, a fifth-year student in commerce, attended Oaklands, Oak Bay High School and Victoria College before proceeding to university.

Well-known in athletic circles, he was captain of the Varsity rugby team last season, and this year is president of the university's Men's Athletic Directory.

He earlier won a $50 prize for essay work.

Buyer Must Prove Sales Tax Paid

Simplified regulations pertaining to the 3 per cent sales tax and trade-in provisions were announced today by Finance Minister Einar Gunderson.

Under the new regulations, a vendor can make a sales tax allowance on a trade-in, when the purchaser certifies that he has paid the tax on the original purchase.

Under the old system, before a vendor could make an allowance it was his responsibility to check with the sales tax department to ensure that the purchaser did pay the tax on the original purchase.

Now, the onus is on the purchaser, who must certify that the tax was paid.

CELLULOID SALES

Films Carry Messages for Canada Sales

Canadian commercial films have been seen in at least 50 countries and are no "strangers" to New York, London, and Paris television, according to one of the key men of the industry.

He is Graeme Fraser, assistant general manager of Crawley Films Ltd., Ottawa, who will address the Victoria Advertising and Sales Club at the Pacific Club tonight at 6.15.

"The company now produces 50 films per year, for private business," he said. "They are used for public relations, advertising, job training, and many other uses."

Mr. Fraser said professional actors are used in most films, especially when there are extensive speaking parts.

"In a straight job-training film, with no speaking to do, a turret lathe operator would be used to demonstrate his machine. But if there are half a dozen lines to be spoken, we've found it easier to train an actor to run the turret lathe," he said.

In 1951 the company sent staffmen to British Guiana, Jamaica, Brazil, Trinidad, England, United States, and to every province in Canada.

"We use practically all Canadian talent," Mr. Fraser said, "and rarely have to import actors and actresses from the United States."

Mr. Fraser said there are 185 sources in Canada which will provide 16 mm. films on about 5,000 subjects.

Hit-Run Suspect Chased, Captured On Foggy Highway

Chief of Police Vernon Lawley pursued and captured a suspected hit-and-run driver of a coal truck in Central Saanich Tuesday night.

Arrested and lodged in the Victoria jail by the R.C.M.P. pending his hearing on a charge of failing to remain at the scene of an accident is Ronald Paul, 28, West Saanich Indian Reserve.

R.C.M.P. at Sidney reported that a flat-deck truck driven on fog-shrouded Wayne Road, near Deep Cove, just before 11 p.m., crashed into a coupe, tearing the front left wheel off the smaller vehicle, and kept on going. The coupe driver was air force recruit John Barton, Patricia Bay. He was unhurt.

Police Hold Confessed Night Raider

Youth Admits Taking Part In Veterans' Club Robbery

City police drive to round up persons responsible for a recent outbreak of burglaries in Victoria resulted in two young men appearing in city police court today.

James F. Friedlander, 24, of 728 Hillside, pleaded guilty to a charge of breaking and entering and committing theft in the building of the Army, Navy, Air Force Veterans on Oct. 20.

The second accused, aged 23, charged jointly with Friedlander, was released when he pleaded not guilty and Prosecutor Alan Bigelow asked that the charge be withdrawn for lack of evidence.

Friedlander was remanded to next Tuesday for sentence. Magistrate H. C. Hall called for a probation officer's report and told accused he could call character witnesses.

A total of $350 worth of mixed hard liquors, cases of beer and cigarettes were stolen from the servicemen's club.

Detective Deans Blackstock told the court that after the building had been entered, the billiard room had been broken into by reaching through the mail-slot in the door to release the catch.

Police still believe that the bulk of loot taken in week-end raids in the city and Saanich indicate an organized gang is at work in this area.

Presumed Dead

R.C.M.P. headquarters here today listed as "presumably dead," R.C.N. stoker Rex Cutt, Flin Flon, Man., who disappeared July 10 from a C.P.R. boat bound from Victoria to Vancouver.

He was on leave from the destroyer Ahtbaskan when he disappeared, and all attempts to trace him have proved futile.

Police said Stoker Cutt's hat and wallet were found on the deck of the passenger vessel.

Manslaughter Case

Gordon William Peterson was freed in Nanaimo Supreme Court Tuesday following his trial for manslaughter arising out of the death on April 9 of Edward Romuld of the Alberni district.

The jury returned the not guilty verdict late Tuesday after only 30 minutes of deliberation.

Romuld died when a sedan driven by Peterson collided with a government gravel truck in the Alberni area.

George Gaetz, B.C. Telephone Veteran, Dies

George Thomas Wellington Gaetz, a well-known figure whose life was linked with the development of telephone service in this area, died Tuesday in Royal Jubilee Hospital. He was 71.

Mr. Gaetz, a tall man with the reputation of having a constitution of iron, was a retired foreman of the construction and line gang for B.C. Telephone Company. He served with the company 32 years, retiring in 1946.

Popular with those who worked under him, he made it a practice never to ask a man to do anything he would not do himself, and frequently undertook the more hazardous jobs personally.

He had many falls in his time, and sustained many broken bones. On several occasions, it was feared injuries he received would end his working day, but each time he returned to the job.

At one time, he fell from a high-tension pole in the downtown business district and went through a plate-glass window.

Born near Halifax, Nova Scotia, he served as a young man with the American navy on the Atlantic sea coast. After his discharge, he traveled all over the continent to satisfy a desire "to see things."

He is survived by his wife, at the family home, 3120 Aldridge Street; two sons, Lory Andrew (Bob) and William Melvin, both of this city, and two daughters, Miss Thyra Gaetz, Victoria, and Mrs. Thelma Harper, of Redwood City, California. He leaves also three brothers and a sister.

Funeral services will be held Thursday at 1.30 at Hayward's B.C. Funeral Chapel. Rev. M. A. J. Waters will officiate. Intement will be at Royal Oak Burial Park.

Creatures From Far-Off Lands on Display Here

By PETE LOUDON

Victoria Shriners have brought a strange collection of creatures to town to stare at people . . . and if you've never been stared at by a white handed gibbon or a golden rumped agouti, here is how its done.

Proceed to Victoria West and opposite the park, on an E. & N. siding, you will find three railway coaches, marked "Zoo." The interiors are entirely unlike any C.P.R. rolling stock you've ever seen. In cages and glass boxes throughout the length of the train are rabbits, snakes, monkeys, alligators, giant rats and many birds . . . and they all stare. There is a mommy lion with a nasty hungry stare and a porcupine who gnaws eagerly at his cage-wire while he examines you for pincushion qualities.

There are snakes and crawlers which never once blink as they look you over.

THEIR EYES BEG

There is a four-legged, hump-backed, Durante-nosed, horsey, Brazilian called a tapir, with begging eyes that call you to turn him out to gambol. There's a monkey called a rhesus, whose eyes plead, too, while he automatically carries out his traditional search.

Birds stare also; the big-billed toucans, the ostrich cousins rhea and emu, they all focus an amazed look at every visitor. There is a Peruvian pair, a llama and a guanaco who wistfully watch your exit and cause you to wonder if you were the exhibit.

And do you know why the gibbon and the agouti are incredulous, why the lioness is mad, why the porcupine is bristling, the snakes are feeling low, the tapir is begging, the birds are amazed and the llama and his chum are sad? It is because they can't stand people!

People keep the leopard in a cage about four by five feet, they keep a native Canadian nomad, the porcupine, in a cage one and a half feet wide and about the same length. They haven't much more than room to turn around.

INSPECTOR FLAYS ZOO

Ben Maggs, S.P.C.A. inspector said today he is "disgusted" at the size of some of the cages of animals in a traveling zoo show here.

Mr. Maggs, who inspected the show Tuesday, said while the animals are well treated, the majority of cages are "much too small."

"I'm not being fanatical when I say the animals should have more room to move about," said the inspector. "I know I wouldn't want to be kept in a clothes closet for the rest of my life."

Remember to Line Shelves When You Clean Them!

By PENNY SAVER

I bet if I could peek into your homes right now I'd find a lot of you busy cleaning out cupboards and getting everything cleaned and in order before the Christmas rush.

I can just visualize you with a pan of hot water, a bar of soap handy, scrubbing shelves before you place their contents back in orderly fashion.

All I hope is that you didn't overlook one important step.

Did you remember to line the shelves?

It's a wise thing to do. Especially if you use the plastic-coated shelf covering which sells at $1.49 for a roll 10 yards long and 15 inches wide.

You'll find that your cupboards are twice as easy to keep clean. And don't worry that your dishes will stick to the covering. They won't.

When you have spread it out on your shelf and used it for awhile you will discover that it won't crack, it's odorless and that if any thing spills on it, a swish of a wet cloth will remove the mark.

The roll of plastic-coated shelf covering comes in a variety of colors and patterns and has a scalloped edge for added attractiveness when you open a cupboard door.

Actually, there are several other uses for the roll. You can use it to protect a wall to line drawers or for decoration at parties.

There's another use you might not think of. It comes in handy for gift wrapping. You'd be amazed how gay and attractive a gift looks when it wears the patterned "lining."

★ ★ ★

From far-off Austria comes an article you may like to place in your home.

It's an ash tray. Not just an ordinary one, mind you. It is different in that it has a figure perched on the side. This figure may be an Alpine boy or girl or a Negro baby.

Now, the unusual part of this little figure is that its head nods continually. That's right, the slightest movement of the ash tray will make the head nod sleepily.

Sells at $1.50.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Hubby's Hair and Waist Need Some Attention, Too

Since Tubby Hubby Diet ran I have neglected my masculine readers. This is, of course, a woman's column, but many subjects are treated which are also important and interesting to men. Therefore, once in a while I give the men a little help.

Recently I have received many letters from men concerning their hairline. I sometimes wonder if baldness is more prevalent among men than women because men do not give their hair the same care women do. Virtually all women brush their hair some, even if just in arranging it. A man cannot depend on brushing for scalp stimulation because his hair is cut so short. He should make up for this with daily scalp massage.

The routine he should use is the same a woman employs. Spread the fingers over the scalp. Keep the fingers in place while rotating the hands, thus making the scalp move. Change the position of the fingers until the entire scalp has been stimulated.

Hair oils and dressings are an essential part of a man's good grooming, but that oiled, plastered appearance is not attractive. When you select your hair oil, keep two things in mind—besides the woman on your mind. Be certain that the goo you use does not have too high a content of alcohol because this is bad for the hair. Also, buy one that contains light oil. You won't look gummy.

Men should also have regular shampoos. I think many men have a blind spot on this question. Since they do not go for hair styling they may forget that a man's hair gets just as dirty as a woman's hair does.

Actually I think a man's haircut is just about as important to his appearance as a woman's is. It doesn't help him any to look as though he had had a saucer put over his head while the cutting was going on. That bump on the back of the head may mean great intelligence, but still looks funny if it is exposed too much. A man with a long, lean face will profit by a middle part just as his little woman will.

I know, men do not have time for these mundane things, but never-the-less they write to me about them. And while we are on the subject, I do not believe that a thick waistline and overweight look any better on a man than they do on a woman. How about it?

If you would like to have my Tubby Hubby Diet Booklet, send 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

AS WE LIVE

It's Wrong to Interfere In Son's Marital Problem

By ELIZABETH B. HURLOCK, Ph.D.

There are times when parental interference does more harm than good. This is one of those cases. For that reason, this mother-in-law had better beware:

Hurlock

(Q)—"Our daughter-in-law is in glory as long as she can spend money and go places. She never thinks we should get anything from our son but if it's her folks, she feels obliged to do anything they ask her to do. She says, 'It's my mother and I feel I owe her that.' She never has meals on time, is a poor manager, and has an untidy home. Are we right if we don't help them out any more?"

(A)—You and your husband are certainly right. If there is enough money for her to spend for pleasure, there is no need for you to deprive yourself to help your son encourage these spend-thrift tendencies in his wife.

Tell both young people how you feel about the matter and what you plan to do. Then let them solve their own problem their own way. If the young woman is a careless housekeeper and has no interest except to spend money for pleasures, it is up to your son to handle her. You can't reform her. All you will do is make trouble for yourself for she will side with her family against you.

And, as usually happens in such cases, she will make things so unpleasant that your son will see less and less of you. If you say nothing against her, she will have no real reason to try to turn your son against you.

Her favoritism to her own family is another problem she and your son should work out—alone. If his income is so limited he must have your help, I don't see how she can help them without giving up her pleasures.

It is a pity your one daughter-in-law is not more of a source of pleasure to you. Perhaps in time she wil lsettle down and take over her responsibilities. In the meantime, try to keep on friendly terms for the sake of your son.

If you have a problem about family or friend, ask Dr. Hurlock to help you. Write in care of this newspaper.

Racial Discrimination Discussed

A resolution asking that Canada's delegates to the United Nations take a more positive position on the question of racial discrimination, highlighted a meeting this week of the Local Council of Women.

The resolution was presented by Mrs. J. M. Thomas, and will be sent to the United Nations convener of the National Council of Women for study. If thought necessary, it will then be presented to the federal government.

Canada recently abstained from voting, along with five other nations, on a question of racial discrimination, dealing specifically with South Africa. Forty-six nations voted in the affirmative, Mrs. Thomas reported.

Mrs. Alan Campbell, United Nations convener, announced plans for marking United Nations Day, October 24. Posters will be distributed to all schools, discussions will be held at the normal school and college, a local department store will feature a window display, and the U.N. flag will fly over the city hall and causeway.

She announced that Professor Geoffrey Andrew of the University of British Columbia will speak on "Canada and N.A.T.O." in the Art Centre on Thursday, October 23. Mr. Andrew is former president of the United Nations Organization in Vancouver.

The council will present a brief to the Liquor Commission giving the opinions and suggestions of local women's organizations, following a report being received of a similar brief presented by the provincial council.

Reports were also submitted by Mrs. Robert Campbell on radio; Mrs. J. W. Price, arts and letters; and Mrs. A. M. Terry, on cinema.

Symbolism in Legislature Topic of McKelvie Address

"It is impossible to go ahead as a nation if we know nothing of the past," Bruce A. McKelvie told members of the University Women's Club, in an address given Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. McKelvie, author of many historical works and authority on British Columbia's past, spoke to a well-attended meeting in Empress Hotel ballroom.

In the preamble to his discussion of the symbols and traditions of our parliament, he commented on the qualities of citizenship, saying "They have come about as a direct result of the achievements and failures of the past." He reminded his audience that he was speaking on the anniversary of Trafalgar, calling that engagement "the greatest battle in history in interests of democracy." It should not be forgotten, Mr. McKelvie said.

He described the inaugurating of the first B.C. legislature, and how, in the absence of a mace, symbol of authority, one was cut out of tin. This, British Columbia's first mace, later was sold at auction among a job lot of kitchen utensils. By his instigation, it was purchased by, and now rests at, Fort Langley, where it originated.

Humorously, he described the bill for Women's Rights, and read a petition against it, circulated at the time by 300 prominent men of Victoria.

Mr. McKelvie was introduced by president, Mrs. E. S. Farr, and thanks were expressed by Mrs. Robert Wallace.

Mrs. Farr gave a report on the biennial conference of Canadian Clubs held in Hamilton in September, which she and Mrs. Gordon Wismer attended as delegates of the University Women's Club.

THE CAINE MUTINY

(Life had presented few problems to Willie Seward Keith until, almost simultaneously, he had received his draft notice and fallen in love.

(It was April, 1941, and Willie graduated from Princeton the year before with a bent for literature had got himself a job in a third-rate night club entertaining at the piano, presenting for the most part his own slightly risque songs.

(His love, for the moment, was a matter of desperation. Its object, May Wynn, a novice singer at the club where Willie worked was far removed from him in social and educational standing, and both were well aware of it. Willie thought the affair could maintain its headlong pace for a few months and then end naturally.

(A party thrown by his wealthy mother and a talk with his ailing father remind Willie of the difference between himself and May Wynn, and that night after May had hinted at attempts to improve her cultural standing to make herself more acceptable as a financee, Willie quails and looks away.

IV

The next day, Sunday, was sunny and clear, and the midshipmen were thankful. A review was scheduled for the pleasure of the commandant of the Third Naval District, a display of the whole military might at Columbia. The other sections of the midshipmen school at Johnson Hall and John Jay Hall were going to merge with the men of Furnald in an array of twenty-five hundred novice naval officers. After breakfast the midshipmen shifted into their dress blues and lined up in front of the hall, with rifles, leggings and gun belts. Demerits flew for a spot on the collar, shoes that failed to reflect the image of the inspector, hair a fraction of an inch too long. A flick of an ensign's hand on the back of a midshipman's neck was an announcement of five demerits, duly recorded by the yeoman who walked close behind him. Willie was flicked. In his eminence of twenty-five demerits he floated lonely as a cloud. The closest contender had seven.

A sixty-piece band of midshipmen blasted brassy marches with more lung power than harmony, colors waved bravely on staffs, and fixed bayonets glittered in the morning sun as the ranks of midshipmen marched onto South Field. Behind the wire fences around the field were hundreds of spectators — parents, sweethearts, passers-by, college students, and satiric small boys. The band used up its repertoire, and was beginning again on "Anchors Aweigh," when all the cohorts of Johnson, John Jay, and Furnald reached their places. A bugle call knifed across the air. "PRESENT ARMS!" blatted the loudspeakers. Twenty-five hundred rifles snapped into position. The admiral strolled onto the field, smoking, followed by a straggle of officers, walking carelessly to symbolize the privileges of rank, but straggling at distances from the admiral strictly regulated by the number of sleeve stripes on each straggler.

The admiral, short, stout and grey-headed, addressed the ranks briefly and politely. Then the performance began. Stepping proudly and confidently to the music after a week of rehearsal, the battalions passed in review, marching, wheeling, countermarching. The spectators clapped and cheered. The small boys marched raggedly outside the fence in imitation of the midshipmen, yelling.

Willie went through his paces in a daze of whirling thoughts about May and demerits. He was not interested in the admiral but he was mightily interested in making no more mistakes.

* * *

The music paused. The marching continued to a flourish of drums signaling the last manoeuvres of the parade. Then the band crashed once more into "Anchors Aweigh." Willie's squadron wheeled toward the fence, preparing to make a flank march off the field. Willie stepped around the wheeling turn, his eye on the line, staying faultlessly in position. Then he fixed his eyes to the front once more, and found himself looking straight at May Wynn. There she stood behind the fence not 20 feet away in her black fur-trimmed coat. She waved and smiled.

"I take it all back. You win!" she cried.

"By the left flank—march!" bawled Roland Keefer.

At the same instant a squadron from Johnson Hall passed them and the leader shouted, "By the right flank—march!"

Willie, his eyes on May, his mind paralyzed, obeyed the wrong order; turned sharply, and marched away from his battalion. In a moment he was cut off from them by an oncoming file from Johnson Hall. He halted after prancing into a vacant patch of grass and realized that he was alone. A row of newsreel cameras close by, all seemingly trained on him, photographed every move.

Commander Merton, a little round-headed man with bristling brown hair and a red face, sat at his desk facing the door when Ensign Acres, the duty officer, marched Willie into his office. He was partly hidden by a bubbling Silex. "Yes, Acres?"

"Sir—Midshipman Keith."

Commander Merton peered sternly around the coffee at Willie. "What now?"

Acres recited the indictment. Merton nodded, dismissed him, locked the door, and flipped a key on his interoffice talkbox. "I don't want any calls or other interruptions until further notice."

"Aye, aye, sir," rattled the box.

The commander filled a cup. "Coffee, Keith?"

"No, thank you, sir," Willie's knees were unsteady.

"I think you'd better have some. Cream or sugar?"

"Neither, sir."

"Sit down."

"Thank you, sir." Willie was more scared by the courtesy than he would have been by rage. There was an air about the coffee of a condemned man's last meal.

Commander Merton sipped in silence for endless minutes.

"Keith," he said at last, "you put me into the peculiar position of wanting to apologize to you for the navy's laws. The sum of demerits for your three new offenses, together with the 25 you have, puts you out of school."

"I know, sir."

"Those demerits make sense. The values were carefully weighed. Any man who can't stay within the bounds of those penalties shouldn't be in the navy."

"I know, sir."

"Unless," said the commander, and sipped for a while, "unless extraordinary, once-in-a-million circumstances are involved. Keith, what's been happening to you?"

There was nothing to lose. Willie poured out the tale of his troubles with May Wynn, including her appearance outside the fence. The exec listened unsmilingly. When the story was done, he pressed his fingertips together and mused.

"In effect, your claim is one of temporary derangement due to a girl."

"Yes, sir. But my fault, not hers."

There was a pause. "Supposing," said Commander Merton, "that I were to give you a total of forty-eight demerits and confine you to the school until graduation. Could you make the grade?"

"I'd like to try, sir!"

"Any offense would put you out—shoeshine, haircut, mussed bed. You'd live with your head on a chopping block. Are you sure you want to tackle such an ordeal?"

"Yes, sir."

"Why?"

Willie thought a moment. Why, really? Even transfer to the army seemed a relief in comparison, after all. "I've never failed anything I've tried yet, sir," he said. "I've never tried to do much, that's true. If I'm no good I might as well find it out now."

"Very well, get on your feet."

Willie jumped to stiff attention. The movement brought him back into the Navy.

"Twenty-three demerits and confined till graduation," snapped Commander Merton, in dry, bitter tones.

"Thank you, sir!"

"Dismissed."

Operated One of First Cash and Carry Grocery Stores in Victoria

The opening of the new Parkdale Grocery at 3400 Douglas Street climaxes Leonard Batchelor's 40 years in the grocery business on Vancouver Island . . . eventful years of which Mr. Batchelor shares many interesting memories along with other long-time residents of this city.

Leonard Batchelor came to Canada from London, England, in the year 1912. His first venture was in the grocery business in Victoria, which prospered through various stages until at one time he operated seven stores and a wholesale house in this city.

There is little about the food business which is not known to Leonard Batchelor. His initiative brought about many changes and effected such streamlining as the present-day cash and carry system of which he was one of the instigators. In addition, he originated the Community Grocers' Association for the benefit of the local grocery dealers.

During his busy career, Leonard Batchelor held the position of president of Kirkham's Ltd., and built and operated the Brentwood Mercantile Store at Brentwood. Later he moved to Nanaimo and successfully operated a food store in that Island city. When it comes to citing the progress of the food business and reviewing the price changes through the past years, Leonard Batchelor has many a story to tell.

The families which have been served throughout the years by Leonard Batchelor will recall the pioneering days of Victoria and Vancouver Island. Many of today's men and women can look back to the years gone by and remember when they skipped into a Batchelor grocery store for a stick of candy!

The completely renovated and modernized store at 3400 Douglas Street, as usual, offers to its patrons the thoughtful attention of Leonard Batchelor, who has spent 40 years serving his neighborhood families with grocery commodities. Besides food items at going prices, the new Parkdale Grocery operates an efficient delivery service. Phone orders will be quickly despatched, when you phone Garden 2823. ***

Canucks Involved In German Fracas

HOHNE, Germany, Oct. 22 (Reuters)—Court martial of four Canadian soldiers, charged with being ring-leaders of a group which wrecked a German hotel Sept. 30, opened today.

The four are Tprs. Evan Ernest Bryans of Lindsay, Ont., who today pleaded innocent, B. A. McPhee of Sudbury, Ont., C. H. Dobson of Elk Lake, Ont., and J. J. R. Rindeau of Montreal.

They are members of C Squadron, Royal Canadian Dragoons, stationed with the Canadian 27th Infantry Brigade. Another 19 Canadians are under open arrest pending result of the court martial, which is expected to last about four days.

The prosecutor, Capt. E. C. Hipwell of Creston, B.C., said the attack had been a "premeditated plot carried out in accordance with a predetermined plan."

Defense counsel Capt. N. Mann of Camp Petawawa, Ont., suggested to the hotel owner that German youth groups often used the hotel, but this was denied.

Hotel owner Willi Hogrefe said he had noticed two groups of Canadian soldiers outside the hotel, but took little notice. He then heard glasses being broken and found the soldiers wrecking the "guest room." His father-in-law was bleeding, he said.

Chandeliers were ripped from the walls, he said, all the windows broken, and all the furniture overturned.

A young carpenter, Henry Kote, said he had been playing cards when the Canadians entered the hotel and "started throwing glasses in our direction."

He tried to hide behind a curtain, but was caught and beaten.

He couldn't identify the soldiers he said.

Outlawed Political Leader Shot to Death

CARACAS, Venezuela, Oct. 22 (AP).—The Venezuelan government announced today that national security officers Tuesday night shot to death Leonard Ruiz Pineda, leader of the underground Accion Democratica Party. He had been on the government's wanted list for your years.

Ruiz Pineda was a prominent leader of the Accion Democratica government when it won an overwhelming victory in Venezuela's last presidential elections in 1947. The government was overthrown by an army coup in 1948 and the ruling military junta outlawed the party.

BRIDGE LESSON

by Oswald Jacoby

"We're having our annual tournament this week-end here in Pittsburgh," writes a correspondent, "so this might be a good time for you to discuss a hand from last year's tournament."

Today's hand poses a bridge player's riddle: When is a safety play not a safety play?

When this hand was played in last year's Pittsburgh tournament, many declarers won the first trick in dummy with the king of clubs, cashed the ace of hearts, and then led a small heart towards dummy. West naturally played low, and some of the declarers then made the "safety play" of finessing dummy's eight of hearts.

East won with the jack of hearts and returned a club, forcing out dummy's ace. West's last trump was drawn with dummy's king and South then began on the diamonds. Unfortunately, the diamonds failed to break, and South had to use his last trump to set up dummy's suit.

This left declarer with no way to dispose of dummy's losing club, so he eventually lost a club as well as a trump for a one-trick defeat.

The successful declarers didn't bother with this dangerous "safety play." After winning the first trick in dummy with the king of clubs, they promptly cashed the ace and king of hearts. They then led out three top diamonds, permitting West to ruff if he wished to do so.

It didn't really matter what West did. South had two trumps left, and could ruff a diamond to set up that suit and still have a trump to take care of dummy's losing club.

The "safety play" in trumps would have been a good idea if the hand presented no other problem. It would have been the correct play, for example, if dummy had held five diamonds headed by the king-queen-jack.

In the actual hand, South had to decide whether to take out insurance against a 4-1 trump break or against a 4-2 diamond break. The bad break in diamonds was much more likely than the bad break in hearts, so declarer could not afford the luxury of a "safety play" in trumps.

IN TUNE WITH THE TIMES

By RAY SIDAWAY

Celebrating National Macaroni Week, Robert Green, secretary of the National Macaroni Institute, honored "Double or Nothing" emcee Walter O'Keefe on the latter's broadcast on Monday when Walter was officially named King's Jester for having "built a national reputation by using his noodle."

The other night little nine-year-old Helen Strohm attended a showing of the stage play "Country Girl," which starred Robert Young in the leading role.

At the final curtain a group of people sitting beside Helen and her mother were lauding the performance of Mr. Young. Helen couldn't resist breaking into their conversation with, "That's My DADDY!"

What she didn't tell them was that she portrays Kathy on "Father Knows Best" and Robert Young portrays her radio "daddy."

At long last Eddie Cantor gets a boy—only in this instance it's a doll.

The veteran comedian, currently recuperating in a Hollywood hospital after suffering a heart attack, received a large doll from the Mayor of Schenectady, N.Y. The inscription on the doll reads as follows:

"The boy Eddie and Ida never expected—presented to Eddie Cantor on behalf of the residents of Schenectady, founded by the Dutch in 1661."

Dana Andrews, one of Hollywood's most distinguished stars, enacts the role of a man who suspects his sister-in-law of murdering his brother, on "Hollywood Star Playhouse," Sunday over KOMO at 4 p.m.

Dan Logan (Andrews) arrives at the inquest to hear the verdict—death by person or persons unknown. Despite all the evidence pointing to his beautiful sister-in-law, Logan finds himself falling in love with her and believing her innocence. With suspicion crowning to certainty, he is forced to take his evidence against her to the local mayor. But in so doing he learns of his dead brother's dishonest tie-up with the local crime syndicate, the real cause of his death, and his sister-in-law's desire to cover up for her husband and at the same time break up the syndicate.

Mysterious Blast Wipes Out Family Of 5 in Latrobe
LATROBE, Pa., Oct. 22 (AP).—A mysterious blast which levelled a two-story home two miles north of here wiped out a family of five Tuesday night.

One of the victims was a 19-year-old expectant mother, Mrs. Hazel Rogosky. A caesarian operation failed to save her child, and Mrs. Rogosky died soon afterwards.

Police investigators reported they could not determine the cause of the blast. Some of the victims were burned beyond recognition.

In addition to Mrs. Rogosky, the dead are: Her husband, Joseph Rogosky, Jr., about 25; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rogosky, Sr., between 65 and 70, and their 18-year-old son, John.

THE DOCTOR SAYS

Husbands Unwanted In Childbirth Room

BY EDWIN P. JORDAN, M.D.

A question is raised in today's first letter which many people must have wondered about.

Q—If a man and his wife want the husband to be in the delivery room when she has her child, should this be permitted? My doctor will not allow it.—Reader.

A—As a rule it is better for the husband to be near the scene but not actually present when his wife has a baby. The psychological effects are more likely to be harmful than helpful. There is a possibility, too, that the husband will misunderstand something which the physician has to do.

I well remember when one young husband almost took a swing at me when I turned his newborn infant upside down and spanked it—to start it breathing, of course.

Q—What can be done for a 13-year-old girl who does not seem to stop growing?—Troubled.

A—Unfortunately, nothing at present. There is no medicine, food or vitamin product which is as yet of practical value either in increasing or decreasing the growth of human beings, though some experiments in this field are taking place.

★ ★ ★

Q—Is it injurious to a baby's health to wear plastic pants constantly day and night?—Mrs. J.

A—I do not know of any reason why the pants themselves should be harmful providing—and this is important—that the youngster is changed as often as it should be.

Q—My doctor has infomed me that I have a tumor of the uterus the size of a melon. Is this dangerous? Can it be dissolved?—J.A.D.

A—This is a fairly large tumor and could be dangerous, depending on what kind of tumor it is. There is no way of dissolving it.

★ ★ ★

Q—Is it dangerous to have an operation for rupture when one also has sugar diabetes—Mrs. V.A.M.

A—If the diabetes is well-controlled, as is usually possible, there should be no particular danger from an operation for hernia.

★ ★ ★

Q—Is it unusual to have a collapsed lung when the cause cannot be discovered?—Mrs. R.E.D.

A—Spontaneous collapse of the lung is not common, but is well known in medical circles.

Edmonton Man Beaten to Death

EDMONTON, Oct. 22 (CP).—A man was beaten to death Tuesday night in downtown Edmonton and police have arrested William Lang, no fixed abode, and charged him with murder.

Police withheld the name of the man who was killed, pending notification of next-of-kin. They said Lang was arrested immediately following the killing by a police officer on his way to work.

It was reported that Lang was trying to rob the victim and when he refused to give up his money Lang hit him over the head and then kicked him in the head.

New Orders Broadcast to B.C. Fishing Fleet After Rains

VANCOUVER (BUP). — New orders regulating fishing for salmon in British Columbia coastal waters were broadcast to the fleet this afternoon following a survey of the rainfall situation by federal fisheries officers in Vancouver.

A. J. Whitmore, chief fisheries supervisor in British Columbia, said the fishing ban on seining off the West Coast of Vancouver Island between Peschino Point and Cape Scott has been lifted.

One to three-day rains in the area had brought spawning streams back to normal and the seiners will be allowed to set nets at 8 a.m. Thursday. Whitmore said, however, that the two-day week-end closure will still apply.

The Nitinat Arm-San Juan harbor zone will continue closed as stream conditions are still unfavorable and all waters between Vancouver Island and the mainland will be sealed Thursday for a 72-hour period. Resumption of fishing will begin Monday morning.

The closure takes in the Johnstone Strait area where the majority of seiners fishing for coho and chum are clustered. The department also ordered a complete closure on waters in the vicinity of Comox Harbor tomorrow night until further notice.

Whitmore said a further set of regulations would be issued early next week.

Winnipeg Voters Go To Civic Polls Today

WINNIPEG, Oct. 22 (CP)—A record, a move for more flexible liquor laws, and a plea to take government from the hands of the business man go on the line today when Winnipeg electors drop ballots for 1953-54 civic officials.

With a stiff, three-way mayoralty fight and a forecast of perfect weather, balloting is expected to be heavy. Thirty-two candidates are in the race for 14 aldermanic and trustee seats.

Mayoralty voting centres on Mayor Garnet Coulter, seeking re-election to a sixth two-year term; corporation head Stephen Juba, and independent, and Donovan Swailes, C.C.F. member of the Manitoba legislature for Winnipeg Centre.

EMINENT U.S. ORGANIST AT ST. ANDREW'S

In Recital Monday Evening

The new organ at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church will be heard at its best on Monday, Nov. 3, when Lauren B. Sykes of Portland will exploit its tonal resources to the full.

Mr. Sykes, associate and choirmaster of the American Guild of Organists, will present a well-balanced program of classical, romantic and modern music starting at 8.15 and will be assisted by the St. Andrew's Church Choir.

The public is invited, a collection to be taken for the organ fund.

Mr. Sykes plays the keyboard instruments (organ, piano, harpsichord and celesta) for the Portland Symphony Orchestra and this season will appear with the group as soloist. He is organist for the Portland Symphonic Choir which he has accompanied in most of the major oratorios.

DESTRUCTIVE

Four Die in Crash

WINSLOW, Ariz., Oct. 22 (AP).—A private cabin plane, flying a 14-month-old polio victim to Phoenix for treatment, crashed in flames four miles southwest of Winslow airport Tuesday night. All four persons aboard were killed.

The dead were identified as: Gerald E. Starr, about 35, the pilot; Vincente Gurule, 14 months; Vincente Gurle, Sr., the polio victim's father, and Ernest Jack Ryan, an ambulance driver.

OLD GOAT'S A YOUNG SPRIG

York Theatre Star Trod Nigeria Boards

BY DAVE STOCK

One of the oldest characters in "Curtain Up" is one of the youngest players.

It's this way: The current production of the York Theatre Company features an old fusspot known as "Mister Augustus Shocklebottom, from Victoria." Mr. S., in the play, is a man of some 50 years who is exceedingly proud of himself, in a modest way, because he has written a play.

The part is taken, and very ably so, by one Michael Rothery, whose age is 21.

Mr. R., as Mr. S., has himself a jolly time poking his nose where it's not wanted, and generally getting in the way of all the other actors. Toward the end of the performance, he even finds himself being hoisted toward the ceiling astride a backdrop.

Mr. Rothery really enjoys himself.

A quiet, self-possessed young man off stage, he readily admits: "I've worked up quite a bit of sympathy for the fellow."

USUALLY NASTY

Interested in drama since he was cast in his first school play at age six, he has taken numerous roles but never anything like Mr. Shocklebottom.

"This is the first innocent part I've had," he exclaimed as he traced over recent years. "Usually," he smiled, "I'm a pretty nasty character."

Becoming a member of the York Company meant giving up his final year of university at U.B.C. Michael was to have gone back to school last month to complete studies leading to a degree in languages.

When offered a chance to act professionally, however, he jumped at the opportunity, and put aside thoughts of continuing his studies.

Born in Birkenhead, Cheshire, England, he gained much early experience in theatricals in inter-house drama competitions at public school at Canterbury. When he graduated there, he went to Nigeria, where his father was engaged as a surveyor, and joined an amateur theatrical group known as the West Africa Players.

He took a leading role in "A Shop at Sly Corner," staged by that company early in 1950. That time he was the villain of the piece, a young spiv named Archie.

He came to Canada with his parents in 1950 and enrolled at Victoria College. He took parts in two shows there. In "A Midsummer Night's Dream," he played Lysander. In "Night Must Fall," he was cast as a pyschopathic killer.

Last year, at U.B.C. he took the lead role of Harpagon in the French play, "L'Avare." It was in that he first became old Harpagon is a man of 70.

THE "PACIFIER"

I was out to lunch, an egg I was eatin', in the coffee shop of Timothy Eaton. It's one of the things I love the most, 2 poached eggs, some tea & toast. A nod to the waitress her daily cue, she turns away & says "Poach Two." In the other egg I was about to drool, when a lady came in, & took the next stool. The baby she carried made me blink, in its little silk dress & bootees of pink. On the top of the counter the baby she placed, "Ohs" & "Ahs" from all over the place. Flat on its back the baby slept, & looked like a doll so beautifully kept. Mother reached for the menu & straightened her hat. I poured my tea, sed "how old is THAT??? "She's just 4 months," Mama said, as she tucked in some hair on baby's head. The waitress was hovering; a smile in her eye, "I'll just have," said the mother, "some coffee & pie." Then she slid the baby closer to me, quite near my dish of tea. Mummie needed more room for her coffee & pie, & then she said, "I'm gonna try; to get that dummie out of her mouth, she'll be getting buck teeth and they'll always face south." "Ah, leave it," I said, "that's so much hooey," she loves that thing, so restful & chewy." "NO," she replied, "she shouldn't chew it." "I'll bet," I smiled, "that you cannot do it." Gently she got it by the string, a tiny pull, but baby did cling. "Leave it," I continued, & wanted to scold, "I dragged on one till 5 years old." "Here," I said, "if you will insist, I'll get it out, I'm deft with my wrist." I turned it gently, it seemed a gyp, baby frowned, then a firmer grip. "mmmmm," I mused, and tried once more, all was h-u-s-h-e-d in that great big store. Gone was the clatter & rushing about, COULD I GET, THAT DUMMIE OUT??? Don't YOU be a dummie, & keep a tight lip, ask your neighbor who has the right grip. "Why, HUMBER'S . . . of course," that's what he'll say, "Direct From Their Warehouse . . . so LESS U do pay." Just like a dentist, I thot I'd work fast, gave the dummie a jerk, & all were aghast; especially the baby, with her wide open jowl, she cracked all the glasses, so pitched was her howl. I grabbed for the sugar, spilt most on my lap, showered the thing, slapped it BACK IN HER TRAP.

B.C. Shocked By Death Of Tory House Leader

THE LATE E. C. CARSON

E. C. Carson Succumbs to Heart Attack

By GORDON FORBES

British Columbia was shocked today by news of the sudden death of Ernest Crawford Carson, former public works minister and Progressive Conservative House leader.

The 58-year-old member for Lillooet—"the province's greatest road builder"—died of a heart attack while digging in the garden of his Mount Joy Avenue home Tuesday afternoon.

Funeral arrangements were being made this afternoon. Hayward's Funeral Parlor is in charge.

Mr. Carson is survived by a widow; two sons, Jack and Pat of Victoria; a daughter, Mrs. Thomas Sutton, Kamloops; a brother, Robert, and two sisters in Salmon Arm and Princeton.

Death of the man who might well have become Tory leader in B.C. cut the P.C.'s strength in the Legislature to three members. Political sources felt Mr. Carson was the man most likely to succeed Herbert Anscomb at the party's forthcoming convention.

Conservative fortunes are at a low ebb. Before the election, by contrast, they held 11 seats in the 48-seat Legislature.

Death of the quiet-spoken member leaves the House standings at: Social Credit, 17; C.C.F., 18; Liberals, 6; Progressive Conservatives, 3; Labor, 1 and vacant, 3.

BY-ELECTION UNCERTAIN

Premier W. A. C. Bennett could not say today if a by-election will be called in Lillooet riding to fill the vacancy before the spring session.

The premier said he was "too shocked" by Mr. Carson's death to consider the political implications.

Although there are by-elections in Similkameen and Columbia November 24 it is unlikely a Lillooet by-election could be arranged for the same date.

"Ernie" Carson was born on the family ranch at Pavilion Mountain in the Cariboo country of the province's interior. He attended a tiny country school until the age of nine. Then he and a brother alternated six months at school in Vancouver with six months at work on the ranch.

After high school, he worked with a railway survey crew, hoping to become an engineer. The First World War intervened and on his return home from overseas he had to take over management of the ranch.

Later, he branched into business and was elected as a Conservative in 1928.

SHOWED INDEPENDENCE

Mr. Carson became minister of mines and trade and industry in the Coalition government in 1942, and in 1946 he took the job he really liked—minister of public works. He remained in that position until the breakup of Coalition in January.

With B.C.'s huge road construction program since the Second World War, he had the most difficult and complicated administrative job in the government.

All Province Pays Tribute to Carson

Sudden death Tuesday of Ernie Carson, long-time member of the B.C. Legislature and former public works minister, has drawn tributes from people in all walks of life throughout the province.

John Hart, premier of the first Coalition administration, today paid him a fitting tribute with: "He was one of the finest fellows I knew. I thought the world of Ernie Carson."

Mr. Hart said: "Word of his death came as a great shock to me. I was associated with him a long time. There was no finer member or minister than he. He was a man of sterling qualities and loyalty. He was always reliable.

"I had the greatest confidence in him and appointed him to the responsible office of minister of public works because I knew there was none more capable."

Premier W. A. C. Bennett said of Mr. Carson:

"Mr. Carson's death is a great shock. We were great personal friends. It was always recognized that he was one of the ablest administrators and one of the best public works ministers that B.C. has ever had. His sudden passing is a great loss to the Legislature and to the public life of B.C. We extend our deepest sympathy to Mrs. Carson and the family."

John H. Cates, former B.C. labor minister—"Mr. Carson was not only a colleague of mine in the cabinet but a great personal friend. He was a man I ad-

$65,000,000 Plan Approved

Green Light for Celgar Project; Integrated Industry for Interior

The provincial government today gave Celgar Development Co. Ltd. permission to go ahead with establishment of a $65,000,000 integrated forest industry at Castlegar.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett and Lands and Forests Minister Robert E. Sommers, in a joint statement, said appeals against granting of the 960,000-acre forest management license had been disallowed.

The government decision gives Celgar the go-ahead signal to start work on its forest development which is designed to produce lumber, sulphate pulp, newsprint and dissolving pulp used in the manufacture of textiles, plastics and explosives.

The license, as granted by the government, contains a number of provisions which reflect new government policy on forest management. The government is hopeful existing licensees will adhere to the new policies, but the government cannot force them. The new provisions will apply to the Celgar license and all future licenses.

"This government realized that previous forest management licenses have not entirely given to the people of British Columbia the results which they desired. Careful consideration and study have resulted in a number of proposed revisions and additions which will be incorporated in Celgar's license," Mr. Sommers said.

Small Operators Are Protected

The small operator has been protected by the establishment of three public working circles, he said. These areas will provide small operators with an annual yield of about twice the volume of timber which they now produce.

One of the most important policy changes is that Celgar must provide a reasonable percentage of the annual crop to be removed by local contractors.

"The government is very much aware that it must be alert to foster and to retain the independence and initiative of the small operator," Mr. Sommers said.

He added that the government has further safeguared the rights of the people in the fact that no foreshore rights will be alienated. Furthermore, anyone may enter and use the licensed area for recreation. Anyone may prospect for minerals in the area or carry on any legitimate business.

Another new feature is that the roads in a forest management license area will be open for public use on Sundays and on statutory holidays.

The minister said the government has been careful to retain all rights to the land. It may withdraw any portion of the area for higher economic use, such as agriculture, mining development, industrial development and the establishment of townsites.

Minister Seeks People's Will On B.C.H.I.S.

Eric Martin Plans 'Grass Roots' Tour

Health and Welfare Minister Eric Martin will embark early in November on a fact-finding tour of central and northern British Columbia in an effort to obtain "grass roots" information on the people's hospital insurance wants.

It was learned today the government's plan to bring delinquents into the scheme—through suspension of arrears—has not, to date, had the desired effect, and the minister intends to go out among the people and get the reasons first-hand.

Actual figures on the number of delinquents who have reinstated themselves under the "new deal" are not available, but it is known the amount has been disappointing to the government.

Mr. Martin is hoping that the number will increase at the end of the year, but other ministers are not so hopeful.

The health minister's tour will serve the purpose of acquainting him more fully with the desires of the people before new hospital insurance legislation is prepared for the spring session.

VISIT HOSPITALS

The minister, it is understood, will discuss hospital insurance with numerous hospital executives on his tour and will address many public meetings.

Purpose of the trip, according to cabinet sources, is to "find out just what the people do want in the way of hospital insurance."

Roughly one in five British Columbians, who should be covered by hospital insurance, have evaded paying premiums.

In an effort to draw these persons into the scheme voluntarily, the government early in September announced suspension of arrears for delinquents.

This means anybody who hasn't paid premiums ever since institution of the scheme in 1949 can re-establish themselves by paying the current premium only.

The government, however, has stressed that through procedures provided in the Hospital Insurance Act the government will continue to collect premium arrears from those persons who can well afford to pay. This is done by making arrangements for installment payments in accordance with a delinquent's means.

14.6 Per Cent Increase Sought, 10-Cent Pay Phone

British Columbia Telephone Company announced today it is seeking an average 14.6 per cent increase in exchange rates and a boost from 5 to 10 cents on pay-station charges.

The increase, if granted, would mean about 35 cents more on the average two-party monthly phone bill in Victoria, and $1.80 on the individual business phone.

The company is also asking an average increase of 12.2 per cent in long distance rates.

Mayor Claude Harrison on receiving a copy of the application said flatly he would oppose any increase.

"I haven't examined the application yet but I will oppose any increase to any of these public utilities," the mayor said. "The people can't keep on paying more. We're not that wealthy.

"I have opposed the B.C. Electric consistently in their applications for increases and I will oppose this."

The telephone company applied to the Board of Transport Commissioners for permission to increase the rates to meet increased costs.

The 14.6 per cent increase in exchange rates is exclusive of inter-exchange charges, which would be unchanged.

INTERIM BOOST ASKED

The company is asking the board to grant an interim hearing at Ottawa at the earliest moment "so that some relief may be given, pending the holding of a full-scale public hearing in British Columbia at a later date."

The company estimates the proposed increases in exchange and long distance rates would give it an increase in exchange and long distance revenue of $2,959,978 or 12.5 per cent.

The application states that the new wage agreement with the union employees, effective June 1, 1952, plus increases in the salaries of non-union employees will increase 1953 operating expenses by $1,031,865.

If the application is granted two-party telephone charges in Vancouver will rise from $3.90 a month to $4.40 and individual business telephones from $11.70 to $13.65.

The company states the lag which has occurred between the time that expenses have increased and increased rates have been granted, has made earnings inadequate.

It states that rates and charges now in effect are "not sufficient to produce the revenue required to meet the necessary costs to maintain and operate its property devoted to the public use."

It estimates that on the basis of its present rates it will suffer a heavy loss in 1953.

This is the third application for rate increases made by the company since 1921.

The company, in its application, claims that it needs the increased rates to maintain its credit and attract capital needed to enlarge and improve its services.

It asks an interim hearing by the board in order than an interim increase may be granted because of the company's "rapidly deteriorating financial position and the urgent necessity for additional revenues."

Iran Formally Breaks With Great Britain

Foreign Minister Hussein Fatemi told reporters the contents of the note will be released later today (12.30 p.m., EST).

The diplomatic break comes as the latest move in the 18-month-long oil dispute. Premier Mohammed Mossadegh said in a radio address last week that Britain had "forced" Iran to break off relations.

A diplomatic break means that neither country will have legations in the other. Fatemi said today that the Iranian charge d'affaires had been instructed to leave London within a week. Sweden will look after Iranian interests there.
